BEYOND REPAIR

Most of us have an uneasy relationship with our stuff. We crave more of it, chasing the thrill of the buy; we experience guilt over it, confronted with the resulting excess; we get tired of it, and largely throw things away thoughtlessly.

Against this cycle of buying and disposal, Jenny Odell found herself growing fascinated with a practice that seemed quietly subversive: the act of repair. After being taught by a particularly crafty friend how to darn a pair of socks, she marvelled at how intimate the socks became to her—and how the repair both took them backwards in time by restoring their function, but also made them something altogether new. She started paying attention to the repair shops in her neighbourhood – tailors, shoe repair, watch repair—and how anti-consumerist their work seemed, how powerful the simple act of repair could be. In fixing and learning to mend the objects around us, we reject the idea that they are transitory, without value, expendable: we think and learn deeply about their construction and their makeup, we form a relationship of duration and understanding. We intervene in things by repairing them; they in turn become more real to us.

Around the same time that she was learning to restore her own things, Odell got involved in a habitat restoration group with the California Native Plant Society. As she learned more about the native landscape, and the work of beating back invasive species, her thinking expanded to the role of individuals in restoring the complex, damaged landscapes of the natural and social world around us. The work of habitat restoration involves the question of what to restore to and why, as well as acknowledging that human involvement may be necessary, even as many imagine that the earth would be better without us. It's also a practice of showing up, over and over, to reinforce the patches of possibility in a wounded landscape.

In BEYOND REPAIR, Odell traces, through intimate stories and examples, how repair offers an expanded way of living in the world, a relationship of care and endurance with profound implications for how we treat the people around us, and how we understand ourselves. It's a tangible act that reaches into the deepest levels of feeling and meaning, one in which we reshape things and are reshaped in turn. In a reality where we often feel powerless isolation against the enormity of what's broken, repair presents a concrete practice of hope and restoration, a way to restore our feeling of belonging in and to the world.

TRAUMA PLOT: A LIFE

A Vogue and Vulture Most Anticipated Book of the Year

From a rising literary star and the author of how to be a good girl comes a brilliant, biting, and beautifully wrought memoir of trauma and the cost of survival

In the thick of lockdown, 2020, poet, critic, and memoirist Jamie Hood published her debut, how to be a good girl, an interrogation of modern femininity and the narratives of love, desire, and violence yoked to it. The Rumpus praised Hood's "bold vulnerability," and Vogue named it a Best Book of 2020.

In Trauma Plot, Hood draws on disparate literary forms to tell the story that lurked in good girl's margins—of three decades marred by sexual violence and the wreckage left behind. With her trademark critical remove, Hood interrogates the archetype of the rape survivor, who must perform penitence long after living through the unthinkable, invoking some of art's most infamous women to have played the role: Ovid's Philomela, David Lynch's Laura Palmer, and Artemisia Gentileschi, who captured Judith's wrath. In so doing, she asks: What do we as a culture demand of survivors? And what do survivors, in turn, owe a world that has abandoned them?

Trauma Plot is a scalding work of personal and literary criticism. It is a send-up of our culture's pious disdain for "trauma porn," a dirge for the broken promises of #MeToo, and a paean to finding life after death.

"An American Annie Ernaux, Hood writes to avenge her people—with incendiary brilliance, wit, pain, and devotion to the search for something like truth."—Kate Zambreno, author of Heroines

"Hood descends into the terrifying dark of the unsayable with the dimmest of flashlights and returns bearing verbal gems, treasures, and marvels. Trauma Plot is a glass case of such wonders." —Torrey Peters, bestselling author of Detransition, Baby

"A magnificent, norm-shattering work." -Kirkus Reviews (starred)

"Brilliant . . . with piercing intellect and lyrical prose, Hood redraws the boundaries of the tell-all memoir. It's a rare feat of storytelling."—Publishers Weekly (starred)

"You'll be rooting for [Hood] through every page." -Vogue

TAYLOR'S VERSION: How Taylor Swift Captured Our Hearts and Conquered the World

Sold in a significant pre-empt

A preeminent Harvard professor and poetry expert explains the artistry—and the celebrity—of Taylor Swift

Taylor Swift has become a peerless superstar, ceaselessly productive and internationally beloved. From her teen country debut to her world tour as the chair of the tortured poets department, Swift's career and her creations have captivated and bewitched us, opening up new ways to see both her life and our own.

In Taylor's Version, the poet and literary scholar Stephanie Burt offers an insightful and heartfelt critical appreciation of Taylor Swift, her body of work, and the community that her art has fostered. Drawing from her 2024 Harvard course, Taylor Swift and Her World, as well as from her years as a Swiftie, Burt examines the purposes, talents, and energies Swift brings to her music and to her persona. She highlights the ways Swift's work remains at once intimate and relatable, portraying people we feel that we know and people we wish we could be, from the first loves and girlhoods on Fearless through the public and private angst of Midnights. How does she do it (with a broken heart)?

Tracing a path through the Eras, Taylor's Version shows what Swift has created, how it works, and what it means.

MATT KESSLER is a journalist based in Birmingham, Alabama. His reporting appears in The Guardian and The Atlantic and has been commended by the Mississippi ACLU. THE WIREGRASS: A Tale of Murder and Retribution Sold in a significant deal, at auction

A vital and propulsive true crime narrative of corruption, injustice, and two young women's murder in a little-known corner of the American Deep South.

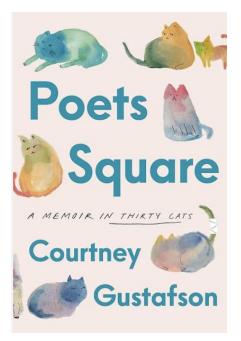

In 1999, in the rural Alabama town of Ozark, high schoolers Tracie Hawlett and J.B. Beasley were found shot in the trusend nk of their car, weeks before the start of their senior year. The night of their murder remains shrouded in mystery. They were driving between field parties. They were lost. But why were their jeans muddy, soaked to the bone? And what drove someone to kill them?

Twenty years passed, but locals could not forget the girls' deaths. Suspicions of a police cover-up reached a fever pitch until, out of the blue, a softspoken Black man named Coley McCraney—a long-haul trucker and ordained deacon—was arrested for the crime. The dramatic trial and controversial conviction that followed would tear this small farming community in two.

The Wiregrass is an under-documented region of the American Deep South, known for its peanuts. Religiously conservative and historically poor, it stretches from Montgomery, Alabama to Macon, Georgia and south to the Florida Panhandle. Cut off from major highways, effectively run by local law enforcement, it's a place where America's fundamental prejudices present themselves without veneer; inequality, violence and racism run bone deep.

A native Alabamian, seasoned journalist, and student of Maggie Nelson and Percival Everett (who gave the book its title), Matt Kessler has spent seven years researching the tangled case of the Beasley-Hawlett murders, attending the trial of Coley McCraney, and gaining the trust of the local community—as well as the ire of local police enforcement.

The Wiregrass is an atmospheric and utterly compelling true crime narrative, as interested in the rippling effects of murder on a small, tight-knit community as it is on exposing truth in places that are otherwise forgotten and neglected. Calling to mind the work of Patrick Radden Keefe (Say Nothing, Empire of Pain) and David Grann (Killers of the Flower Moon, The Wager), as well as Michelle McNamara's legendary I'll Be Gone in the Dark, this is a thrilling yet profound story of race, class, and the corruption of power.

POETS SQUARE: A Memoir in Thirty Cats

Sold in a major pre-empt

An intimate memoir about the importance of community and care in a world that can feel impossibly broken— and a story about accidentally going viral while tending to a colony of feral cats.

When Courtney Gustafson moved into a rental house in the Poets Square neighborhood of Tucson, Arizona, she didn't know that the property came with thirty feral cats. Focused only on her own survival—in a new relationship, during a pandemic, with poor mental health and a job that didn't pay enough—Courtney was reluctant to spend any of her own time or money caring for the wayward animals. But the cats—their pleading eyes, their ribs showing, the new kittens born in the driveway—didn't give her a choice.

She had no idea about the grief and hardship of animal rescue, the staggering size of the problem in neighborhoods across the country. And she couldn't have imagined how that struggle—toward an ethics of care, of individuals trying their best amid spectacularly failing systems—would help pierce a personal darkness she'd wrestled with for much of her life. She also didn't expect that the TikTok and Instagram accounts she created to share the quirky personalities of the wild but lovable cats, like Monkey, Goldie, Francois, and Sad Boy, would end up saving her home.

Courtney writes toward a vision of connectedness—from the dark alleys where she feeds feral cats, from inside the tragically neglected homes where she climbs over piles of trash and occasionally animals, from her own driveway with the cats she loves and must sometimes let go. Compelling and tender, Poets Square is as much about cats as it is about the urgency of care, community, and a little bit of dumb hope.

"Truly moving; a heartfelt exploration of the humanity at the heart of animal welfare. Courtney masterfully weaves together stories of cats with stories of her own life and the lives of her community members—raw, flawed, and striving for goodness in a complex world. Her journey from cat observer to dedicated caregiver and community builder is profoundly inspiring."—Hannah Shaw, New York Times bestselling author of Cats of the World

"Cats are mystical beings, bridging the spiritual and the tangible. Courtney Gustafson's Poet Square is a book that helps us connect to this spiritual world, offering a bridge to the ethereal."—Ai Weiwei

"Tender [...] One need not be a cat person to be enchanted by this" - Publishers Weekly

TWO LEFT FEET

Sold in a two-book deal, at auction

When a threateningly talented and annoyingly handsome new midfielder joins the team, London football star Oliver Harris must fight to defend his roster spot...and his heart.

London-based Premier League footballer Oliver Harris is already nervous enough about what the team's new management will mean for his place in the lineup, and a mid-season injury is absolutely the last thing he needs. Things go from bad to worse when the team's coach asks him to spend his recovery mentoring a new teammate—who Oliver instantly suspects is meant to replace him, though he sees no real choice but agreeing to show him around.

Leonardo Davies-Villanueva is returning to Camden after a string of lackluster performances in his native Spain, and he's looking for one last shot to jumpstart his career at the club where he once played in the youth academy. Oliver immediately finds brash, over-eager Leo profoundly irritating, and can barely go through the mentorship motions without outright hostility. But as he begrudgingly comes to admire Leo's skillful play in the midfield, and warms to his new teammate's humor and energy, he begins to slowly see Leo as a friend—and then, with mounting horror, to realize he wants much more than friendship.

Leo craves Oliver's attention and his partnership in the game. Oliver needs, desperately, to salvage his career and not fall for a teammate—especially given that Oliver has long kept a tight lid on the secret of his sexuality, in a league without a single out player. As the season heats up both on and off the field, there's a lot more than the football title on the line.

TWO LEFT FEET is a beautifully written, incredibly warm upmarket rom-com that will appeal to readers of Emily Henry, Casey McQuiston, Alison Cochrun, and CLEAT CUTE, as well as captivating readers who loved the feeling of Ted Lasso, Notting Hill or Bend it Like Beckam. A story with heart, heft, and real humor, it's a novel that captures the dizzying feeling of falling in love with a person who shares your life's passion. It's also a love letter to football (or as we American heathens would call it, soccer), and to the courageous, transformative power of becoming who you're meant to be.

THE LAST ICEBERG TASTING MENU: A Novel in Stories

In a not-too-distant future, the world's last glacier has been downgraded to the world's last iceberg. While society mourns another natural wonder lost to climate change, the billionaire—a former tech mogul turned restaurateur—becomes obsessed with obtaining a piece of the ice to serve at his restaurant. The iceberg has been deemed a protected entity by the United Nations, but that doesn't worry the billionaire. He needs the ice.

THE LAST ICEBERG TASTING MENU is a speculative, propulsive literary novel-in-stories following the waning days of the world as we know it, and the nine people who find their fates intertwined with the iceberg and one another across space, time, and class. There's the helicopter pilot who aids and abets the billionaire's heist despite physical and emotional scars from what she saw while working in search and rescue amid environmental catastrophes wrought by global warming; the billionaire's wife, who reserved her place in a future Mars colony by allowing her consciousness to be contained in a box as the world burned; a pair of twins who have only ever lived at sea and now lead scuba tours of communities drowned by rising waters; and finally, the security guard who will do whatever it takes to provide protection (and air conditioning) for his young family, and becomes embroiled in a plot to reclaim the little of the iceberg that remains in containment before it's gone forever.

THE LAST ICEBERG TASTING MENU explores themes of climate change, wealth inequality, queer lives, and immortality, combining the ensemble storytelling of Colum McCann's LET THE GREAT WORLD SPIN, the speculative nature of Sequoia Nagamatsu's HOW HIGH WE GO IN THE DARK and C. Pam Zhang's LAND OF MILK AND HONEY, with the humor and heart of GLASS ONION.

VALENCIA

25th Anniversary Edition With a New Foreword by Maggie Nelson

An anarchic and unflinching cult novel "charged with reflection, anger, and the feeling of being alive" (Village Voice), tracing a year of love and lust in San Francisco's lesbian underground

Valencia is a fast-paced account of one girl's search for love and high times in the dyke world of 1990s San Francisco.

Fleeing Tucson and her rotten (ex) girlfriend, Michelle lands in the Mission District, where queers from all over the country are arriving in search of themselves and each other. An aspiring poet, she hurls herself into the city's riotous underbelly, stumbling through nightlife and open mics, drug adventures, and a string of hook ups, break ups, and make ups. As butches and besties spin in and out of Michelle's orbit, she ponders the powerful force and casual cruelty of their desires, and of her own—all in a singular, biting deadpan voice shot through with humor and heartbreak.

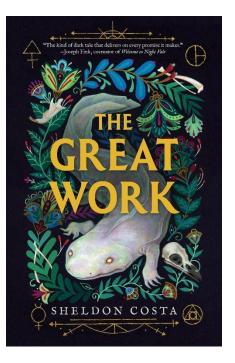

Heady, beer-sticky, and brimming with life, Valencia is a sharply observed and piercingly funny chronicle of a year lived close to the bone. Now with a new foreword from Maggie Nelson, this lesbian cult classic is ripe for rediscovery.

"Valencia is one of the few true life-changer books I've encountered. One of those books that gets casually slipped to you, and then, a couple hours later, you understand you've been living all wrong, that everything must change. I wish you luck in the aftermath of reading it!" —Torrey Peters, author of Detransition, Baby

"I consider Michelle Tea a literary MOTHER—champion, organizer, and co-conspirator of the most potent alt-literature scenes San Francisco has witnessed in decades. I will forever tip my hat to her and the timeless and immortal text that is VALENCIA."—Brontez Purnell, author of 100 Boyfriends

"If you want to know how dangerous and great and awful it is to be a girl you'll scarf Valencia right up. There's so much colliding and 'sharing.' I mean in the good way—sharing bodies, drugs, stories and clothes. The street today is full of girls if you haven't noticed." —Eileen Myles, author of Chelsea Girls

"A missive sent straight from the mayhem." -Maggie Nelson, author of The Argonauts

THE GREAT WORK

A grieving man and his nephew hunt down a myth in this gothic Western adventure for fans of Karen Russell and Victor LaValle.

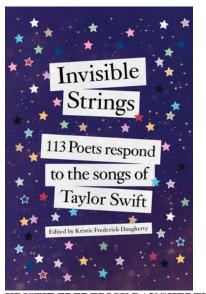

Alone in a frontier town in the brand-new state of Washington, Gentle Montgomery is grieving his best friend. Liam, a self-taught alchemist, was killed when he tried to capture a creature that shouldn't exist: a giant salamander that drives men mad. When Gentle's nephew Kitt arrives at his doorstep, the two set out together to track the monster down, so they can use its blood in an alchemical formula that will bring Liam back to life.

It's a hard and haunted journey through the Northwestern frontier. The salamander produces surreal nightmares and waking dreams of a blighted, burning future. And Gentle and Kitt soon find themselves pursued by a bloodthirsty hunter, a sadistic judge, and a doomsday cult, all of whom have their own plans for the river monster. Armed with nothing but Liam's alchemical notebooks, they must not only find the salamander but learn to understand it—and the terrifying visions it causes—before it's too late.

Unsettling and profound, The Great Work is an arcane adventure through the wilderness of friendship and the rotten heart if the early American empire.

"The Great Work is a vision of America as both homeland and horror story. And it also is just a good ol' page turner, the kind of dark tale that delivers on every promise it makes." — Joseph Fink, co-creator of Welcome to Night Vale

"Costa's rip-snorting debut is a wild ride through freaky old America: backwoods alchemists, a sadistic reverend judge, an animalistic cult, and a quest for a primeval monster of nightmares come together in a hell-for-leather frontier yarn packed with action, wonder, and heart." — James Kennedy, author of Bride of the Tornado

INVISIBLE STRINGS: 113 Poets Respond to the Songs of Taylor Swift

With an introduction by Sir Jonathan Bate

Over 15,000 copies sold in three months

An anthology of brand-new poems inspired by Taylor Swift songs, from a powerhouse group of contemporary poets, including Kate Baer, Maggie Smith, and Joy Harjo.

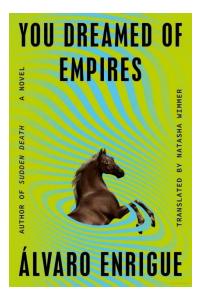

With a record-breaking four Grammy awards for Album of the Year, Taylor Swift stands alone in the world of pop music. One of the most talented lyricists of all time, her music captivates millions of fans throughout the globe with the narrative depth and emotional resonance of her songwriting. In Invisible Strings, poet, professor, and dedicated Swiftie Kristie Frederick Daugherty has brought together 113 contemporary poets, each contributing an original poem that responds to a specific Taylor Swift song.

In a spirit of celebration and collaboration, poets have taken a cue from Swift's love of dropping clues and puzzles for her fandom to decode, as each poem alludes to a song without using direct lyrics. Swifties will enjoy closely reading each of the poems to discover which song each poet responded to; each poem responds to only one song.

The collection showcases a diverse and accomplished array of writers including the 23rd US Poet Laureate Joy Harjo, Pulitzer Prize winners Diane Seuss, Yusef Komunyakaa, Carl Phillips, Rae Armantrout, Paul Muldoon, and Gregory Pardlo, and bestselling poets Maggie Smith, Aimee Nezhukumatathil, Kate Baer, amanda lovelace, Tyler Knott Gregson, Lang Leav, Shikha Malaviya, Richard Siken, and Holly McNish.

Swifties will experience the profundity and nuance of Swift's lyrics through these poems, while having fun matching the poems to songs from all of her eras—vault tracks included! For poetry lovers, this one-of-a-kind anthology is an unparalleled collection of new work from today's most lauded and revered poets.

"Meditative, varied, and visceral, paying tribute to Swift's love of words and her deeply felt passions . . . [an] indelible, beautiful collection."—Booklist

YOU DREAMED OF EMPIRES

A New York Times Top Ten Book of 2024 A New York Public Library Top Ten Book of the Year A Guardian Best Book of the Year

From the visionary author of Sudden Death, a hallucinatory, revelatory colonial revenge story.

One morning in 1519, conquistador Hernán Cortés enters the city of Tenochtitlan – today's Mexico City. Later that day, he will meet the emperor Moctezuma in a collision of two worlds, two empires, two languages, two possible futures.

Cortés is accompanied by his captains, his troops, his prized horses, and his two translators: Friar Aguilar, a taciturn friar, and Malinalli, an enslaved, strategic Nahua princess. After nearly bungling their entrance for the city, the Spaniards are greeted at a ceremonial welcome meal by the steely Aztec princess Atotoxtli, sister and wife of Moctezuma. As they await their meeting with the emperor – who is at a political and spiritual crossroads, and relies on hallucinogens to get by – Cortés and his entourage are ensconced in the labyrinthine palace. Soon, one of Cortés's captains, Jazmín Caldera, overwhelmed by the grandeur of the place, begins to question the ease with which they were welcomed into the city, and wonders at the chances of getting out alive, much less conquering the empire. And what if... they don't?

To the east is the future. To the west is the past. If you were permitted to cross the valley's border, which direction would you go?

For fans of David Mitchell, Ruth Ozeki, and Kazuo Ishiguro, an exquisite literary speculative novel about an isolated town neighbored by its own past and future.

Sixteen-year-old Odile vies for a coveted seat on the Conseil. If she earns the position, she'll decide who may cross her town's heavily guarded borders. On either side, it's the same valley, the same town. To the east, the town is twenty years ahead in time. To the west, it's twenty years behind. The towns repeat in an endless sequence across the wilderness. When Odile recognizes two visitors she wasn't supposed to see, she realizes that the grieving parents of her friend Edme have been escorted across the border, on a mourning tour, to view their son while he's still alive in Odile's present. Edme—who is brilliant, funny, and the only person to truly know Odile—is about to die. Sworn to secrecy in order to preserve the timeline, Odile now becomes the Conseil's top candidate. Yet she finds herself drawing closer to the doomed boy, imperiling her entire future.

IN BLOOD, FLOWERS BLOOM: A World War II Story of Valor and Forgiveness Across Generations

An intergenerational story of war, forgiveness, and memory told through stolen and returned battlefield souvenirs.

How do we remember war? How do we forgive? In Blood, Flowers Bloom illuminates one of the last untold stories of World War II, the common act of soldiers, sailors and Marines taking their enemy's possessions after victory. This is the story of a single Japanese battle flag found among the belongings of a long-passed American WWII veteran, originally belonging to a Japanese soldier. In telling the story of this flag, and its journey from battle in the Philippines to a shed in upstate New York, awardwinning writer, Samantha Bresnahan reveals the way in which objects represent generations of trauma, imperialism, and memory.

Weaving through time, In Blood, Flowers Bloom tells the overlapping stories of two families, that flag, and a decades-long quest: here we meet American Iwo Jima veteran Marty Connor, Japanese imperial Naval captain turned Buddhist monk Tsunezo Wachi, and Masataka Shiokawa, the resilient son of a Japanese soldier killed in battle at Okinawa. These three men could have lived and died as enemies—that was their historical prerogative. Instead, they banded together as uneasy allies, and then eventual friends, in their shared mission to return artifacts taken by American GIs to their rightful owners, giving Japanese families a new opportunity for closure and healing the wounds inflicted by loss of loved ones—both physically and spiritually.

"In Blood, Flowers Bloom offers renewed understanding of how that war was waged by military leaders but fought by millions of young men, illuminates the legacy of trauma and loss on both sides, and demonstrates the power of deceased soldiers' personal belongings, left behind on a battlefield, to create intimate, cross-cultural connection and healing on both sides of the Pacific." —Susan Southard, author of Nagasaki: Life After Nuclear War

"With meticulous research and journalistic rigor, Bresnahan crisscrosses time and continents to weave this haunting, human tale of trauma, healing, cruelty and generosity."

FILTERWORLD: How Algorithms Flattened Culture

From New Yorker staff writer and author of The Longing for Less Kyle Chayka comes a timely history and investigation of a world ruled by algorithms, which determine the shape of culture itself.

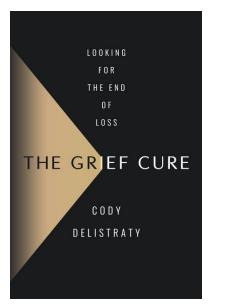

From trendy restaurants to city grids, to TikTok and Netflix feeds the world round, algorithmic recommendations dictate our experiences and choices. The algorithm is present in the familiar neon signs and exposed brick of Internet cafes, be it in Nairobi or Portland, and the skeletal, modern furniture of Airbnbs in cities big and small. Over the last decade, this network of mathematically determined decisions has taken over, almost unnoticed—informing the songs we listen to, the friends with whom we stay in touch—as we've grown increasingly accustomed to our insipid new normal.

This ever-tightening web woven by algorithms is called "Filterworld." Kyle Chayka shows us how online and offline spaces alike have been engineered for seamless consumption, becoming a source of pervasive anxiety in the process. Users of technology have been forced to contend with data-driven equations that try to anticipate their desires—and often get them wrong. What results is a state of docility that allows tech companies to curtail human experiences—human lives—for profit. But to have our tastes, behaviors, and emotions governed by computers, while convenient, does nothing short of call the very notion of free will into question.

In Filterworld, Chayka traces this creeping, machine-guided curation as it infiltrates the furthest reaches of our digital, physical, and psychological spaces. With algorithms increasingly influencing not just what culture we consume, but what culture is produced, urgent questions arise: What happens when shareability supersedes messiness, innovation, and creativity—the qualities that make us human? What does it mean to make a choice when the options have been so carefully arranged for us? Is personal freedom possible on the Internet? To the last question, Filterworld argues yes—but to escape Filterworld, and even transcend it, we must first understand it.

"[Filterworld] evokes less transient impulses than genuine, lingering feelings: depression about our big-box corporate dystopia and admiration for Chayka's curiosity and clear writing style." — Alexandra Jacobs, The New York Times Book Review

"[Chayka] brings stark clarity... [Filterworld] does the near impossible... This is a book about technology and culture. But it is also, in the end—in its own inputs and outputs and signals—a book about politics." —Megan Garber, The Atlantic

THE GRIEF CURE: Looking for the End of Loss

In this lyrical and moving story of the world of Prolonged Grief, journalist Cody Delistraty reflects on his experience with loss and explores what modern science, history, and literature reveal about the nature of our relationship to grief and our changing attitudes toward its cure.

When Cody Delistraty lost his mother to cancer in his early 20s, he found himself unsure how to move forward. The typical advice was to move through the five stages, achieve closure, get back to work, go back to normal. So begins a journey into the new frontiers of grief, where Delistraty seeks out the researchers, technologists, therapists, marketers, and communities around the world who may be able to cure the pain of loss in novel ways. From the neuroscience of memory deletion to book prescriptions, laughter therapy, psilocybin, and Breakup Bootcamp, what ultimately emerges is not so much a cure as a fresh understanding of what living with grief truly means.

As Delistraty created his own ad hoc treatment plan, the American Psychiatric Association and the World Health Organization gave extended, disruptive grief an official name: Prolonged Grief Disorder. A diagnosis, based on meeting several symptoms and contingencies, has opened innovative avenues of treatment and an important conversation about a debilitating form of grief, but it has also opened a debate as to whether this form of grief, no matter how severe and unrelenting, is best approached medically at all.

Braiding deep, emotional resonance with sharp research and historical insight, Delistraty places his own experience in dialogue with great writers and thinkers throughout history who have puzzled over this eternal question: how might we best face loss?

"If ever you've experienced grief, or if ever you expect to, you really need to read The Grief Cure... magnificent." —Susan Cain, author of Bittersweet and Quiet

"Delistraty keenly weaves his open grief into a broader fabric full of curiosity and sorrow, investigating the numerous ways people have tried to heal or move through grief. [His] voice is insightful and attuned to nuance, exploring the dynamics of grief hierarchies and public performances, always returning to the crucial question that propels his inquiry: When is pain a problem to be solved, and when is it simply part of being alive?" —Leslie Jamison, author of Splinters and The Empathy Exams

BOUND UP: On Kink, Power, and Belonging

A powerful work of nonfiction on kink, assimilation, and inherited trauma.

Beginning from the author's own experience as a Jewish person exploring Nazi kink, the book expands into a wider conversation about how sexuality and embodied practices meet historical oppressions. Combining the personal and critical, BOUND UP reads across alt-right Furries, emerging BDSM cultures, and the slipperiness of racialization to reckon with trauma, humor, and systemic vs. individual responsibility—and ultimately to argue for the essential role of the body in grappling with history.

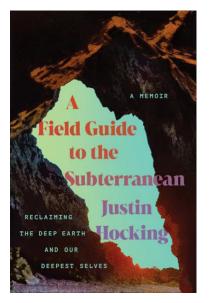

Particularly relevant in the wake of #metoo and our ongoing cultural discussion of consent, BOUND UP insists on the resilience of sexuality and the restorative power of kink. How can honest play and direct communication lead to true forms of rehabilitation on both personal and political levels?

In smart, often darkly funny prose, Fridman builds on the legacy of autofiction from writers like Chris Kraus and Sheila Heti, discussions of queer healing in Maggie Nelson and Audre Lorde, and the work of feminist and queer researchers and critics including Saidiya Hartman, J. Jack Halberstam, and Hannah Arendt. An earlier version was shortlisted for the 2020 Graywolf Prize in Nonfiction.

"Honest, informative, and often hilarious, Bound Up brilliantly renders all the complexities that come with being an American Jew [...] With honesty and insight, Fridman's unique perspective pushes the boundaries of understanding desire and the enduring legacies of the past." —Joey Soloway, director and producer of Transparent

"Fridman is my favorite type of writer: one whose fascination with a subject is so profound and acutely felt and rigorously investigated that after reading her work I come out obsessed with the topic. I will be thinking about her completely original (and erotic!) exploration of Jewish history in Bound Up for years." —Bess Kalb, author of Nobody Will Tell You This but Me

""I've promised myself I'll say words I've been taught not to, to uncover what they conceal,' Leora Fridman writes in her revelatory book, Bound Up, and she does just that, exploring kink as it relates to intergenerational Jewish trauma, disability, and merely trying to exist as a woman in the twenty-first century. In her thoughtful exploration of her own story, Fridman tells a wider tale of power, grace, and survival, and readers will be grateful to benefit from her bravery."—Lynn Melnick, author of I've Had to Think Up a Way to Survive

A FIELD GUIDE TO THE SUBTERRANEAN: Reclaiming the Deep Earth and Our Deepest Selves

Critically acclaimed author of The Great Floodgates of the Wonderworld heralds a radically inventive and kaleidoscopic approach to the genre of nature writing and memoir

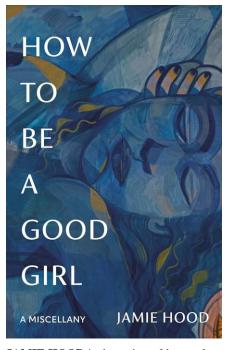

A Field Guide to the Subterranean is about the lessons of hard-won renewal and the ad hoc spiritual rigging sometimes necessary to overcome existential challenges. Hocking uses various modes—memoir, natural history, cultural criticism, narrative nonfiction, science writing—to investigate the ways in which the environment, not just our polluted natural surroundings but colonial extractive character, thwart self-knowledge and connection to the world. In particular, Hocking reckons with the broken, latchkey household of his 80's childhood in an area of Colorado ravaged by mining and nuclear testing, as well as toxic elements found in Gen X skateboarding and outdoor sub-cultures which led him to struggle to accept his own queerness. Living Frost's adage that "the only way out is through," Hocking boldly mines the self, finding footholds in natural wonder, birding, surfing, a generous partner, and service, to climb out anew.

"Justin Hocking has created a profound geological journey of the soul, unearthing wisdom about masculinity, the colonization of land and people, and the possibility that we might recover our own hearts if we are willing to be in intimate relationship to the non-human world. A geo love song." —Lidia Yuknavitch

"Justing Hocking is a wizard who crafts his stories with equal measures of passion, poetry, and erudition. His writing voice makes you want to follow him to the end of the Earth, or into its deepest caverns, so that he can show you all of the beautiful and amazing things to be found there." —Hector Tobar, Publisher's Weekly

HOW TO BE A GOOD GIRL: A Miscellany

The ambitious and experimental debut by Jamie Hood, author of Trauma Plot, interrogating the "good girl" archetype and the price one pays to embody it.

In the thick of winter 2020, when so many books were buried beneath the catastrophe of the COVID-19 news cycle, one unlikely debut seemed to cut through the noise. Jamie Hood's How to Be a Good Girl was an inventive and hybrid work of self-making, mingling diary entries, poetry, literary criticism, and love letters to interrogate the archetype of the "good girl," and the ideas of femininity, passivity, desire, and trauma that come with it. Journeying from the ice age to our modern-day climate crisis, it devoured texts as expansive as Levinas and Plath to the Ronettes and after-school specials, all the while asking: what pound of flesh must a woman pay to be seen as "good."

How to Be a Good Girl was a critical darling when it was first published by Grieveland. The Rumpus praised its "bold vulnerability," and Vogue named it a Best Book of 2020. Now, Vintage is proud to reissue this provocative and genre-bending debut and find new readers for an exciting, new literary voice.

"An utterly compelling blend of lyricism, diary, and criticism that has become my go-to for invoking the brilliant, trans-eye view of the agonies and pleasures of heterosexuality, Hood gives voice to ideas I don't need until she speaks."—Torrey Peters, author of Detransition, Baby

"how to be a good girl is a book of tenacious generosity, rooted in the strength and vulnerability that attend love. Hood's writing probes the ache of attachment to reaffirm, not disavow, a commitment to living (feeling) deeply. If you crave the comfort of a sensitive company of a friend who refuses the temptations of bitterness and cynicism even in the hardest moments, you will find it here." — Charlotte Shane, author of An Honest Woman

"It's not every collection of writing that can move seamlessly from the legacy of European colonization to tepid sex with condescending men to meditations...Jamie Hood has a gift for making many different forms of expression coexist within one work."—Vogue

"how to be a good girl reads like a revelation... Hood breaks open notions of goodness and girlhood and rearranges the shards with care. While reading, I had so many moments of recognition that what I'm left with is a feeling of deep gratitude. This is a book I'll return to again and again." —Kate Elizabeth Russell, author of My Dark Vanessa Why Are People Into That? A Cultural Investigation of Kink Tina Horn

WHY ARE PEOPLE INTO THAT?: A Cultural Investigation of Kink

From a #1 Apple podcast host, Lambda Literary fellow, and dominatrix comes a sex-positive, judgment-free cultural deep-dive into the world of kink.

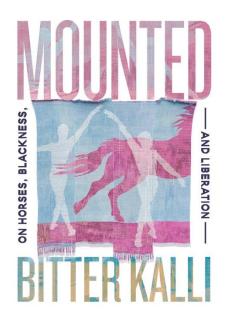

When celebrated BDSM educator Tina Horn first launched Why Are People Into That?!, publications from Vice to Buzzfeed heralded it as one of the best sex podcasts around. Each episode centered around a different fetish or fantasy, thoughtfully examining why, exactly, different strokes work for different folks. From sex workers and scientists to artists and activists, Tina's wide range of guests helped educate fascinated listeners across the world on the wide spectrum of humanity's appetites. With her listeners growing more and more insatiable, she soon realized that the only way to address the titular question with all the depth and nuance it deserved was to turn that idea into a book.

From spanking, strap-ons, and sluts, to taboos involving cake, chains, and cannibalism, WHY ARE PEOPLE INTO THAT? explores the universal drives that shape even the most specific erotic tastes, and the cultural context that molds and is molded by the way we conceptualize pleasure, gender, fantasy, and power. With buoyant prose, Tina invites us to reconsider everything we thought we knew about sexuality. How, for example, should we think about "consensual nonconsent" in a post-#MeToo era? How does cross-dressing fit in with our evolving cultural understanding of gender performance and identity? And what do foot fetishists, fisters, and FinDoms have in common?

Blending insightful cultural criticism, investigative journalism, and spicy anecdotes from Tina's 15+ years of hard-earned expertise in the sex industry and beyond, WHY ARE PEOPLE INTO THAT? is a philosophical-but-fun exploration of the prismatic spectrum of human desire and the expansive possibilities of pleasure. For fans of adrienne maree brown and Emily Nagoski, this raunchy and rousing book is perfect for anyone who is interested not only in the intricacies of what we desire, but in how desire itself really works.

"Finally, a book about sex that is actually sexy. Full of curiosity, profound knowledge, a command of craft, and—yes—eros, Tina Horn isn't here to explain, she is here to explore. [...] In a way, every reader will hold in their hands a different book, exactly the one they, and only they, need."—Joseph Osmundson, author of Virology, a National Book Critics Circle Award finalist in nonfiction

MOUNTED: On Horses, Blackness and Liberation

Joining the growing Black creative movement currently refashioning horses and cowboy imagery, a thoughtful, probing exploration of the shared history of Blackness and horses which reveals what its image can teach us about nationhood, race, and culture.

Drawing on their personal history as a former urban equestrian, Black queer person, and child of Jamaican and Filipino immigrants, essayist and art critic Bitter Kalli contends the horse should be regarded as a critical source of power and identity in Black life.

In a series of astute essays, Kalli explores the work of Black artists and influencers from Beyoncé to filmmakers Tiona Nekkia-McClodden and Jeymes Samuel and explores their own life-long relationship to equines. Alternatively playful and critical, meditative and biting, these essays navigate time and place—from the shadows of racetracks where jockey culture and the ubiquity of "equestrian chic" was born, to the reclamation—or, in Lil Nas X's word, yeehawification—of the image of the cowboy, to the fraught connections of equestrian sport to slavery, US militarization, and European colonial domination. At heart, Kalli probes a central question: What does it mean for Black people to ride and tend horses in the context of a culture that has also used horses against them?

Throughout these essays, Kalli reflects on the experience of being the only Black member of the equestrian team at Columbia University, and how the aesthetics, ethos, and practice of horse stewardship contributed to their understanding of gender, sexuality, and radical community building. Mounted moves beyond the reductive stereotypes that dominate our perceptions of "horse people"—the swaggering masculinity, snooty elitism, and assumed whiteness—to reveal how Black people relate to the image and physical presence of the horse in nature and culture, considering violence, sexualization, power, migration, and more through its image.

AT THE BOTTOM OF EVERYTHING: Conor Oberst and Our Dystopian Digital Age

US rights sold in a six-figure deal, at auction UK rights sold in a pre-empt

The first and only authorized biography of the indie-rock star Conor Oberst, frontman of Bright Eyes and Desaparecidos—a dramatic, intimate narrative opening a portal into the unhinged decades of millennials' coming-of-age.

In bedrooms the world over, through the early 2000s, sensitive teens spent untold hours quietly crying over the lyrics of a boy wunderkind from Omaha, Nebraska. With his swoopy, black bangs, his candid realness, and his deep, dark, unknowable heart, Conor Oberst was "indie rock's reigning poet-prince" – our generation's Bob Dylan, The New Yorker among others speculated. Against a backdrop of global upheaval and financial crisis, he spoke to young millennials' disillusionment like no one before.

These were the days of LiveJournal, Tumblr, and LimeWire, the advent of online fandom and the mainstream explosion of emo and indie music, and Oberst was catapulted onto a global, digital stage, and into an enduring place in the cultural canon. Yet the man himself remained an enigma: intensely private and clearly tortured, he has never divulged large swaths of his life story to the public.

That is, until he met the writer Emma Kemp. Through years of steady trust-building, Kemp has secured sustained and exclusive access to Oberst and his inner circle, allowing her to track the story of an anxious and existential 12-year-old prodigy up to the dizzying heights of fame, love, and musicmaking – and into the spiraling shadowlands of depression and addiction.

At The Bottom of Everything is an original, intimate, and honest portrait of an artist who shaped the social and political consciousness of a generation. Oberst's tumultuous personal narrative is deeply compelling in its own right, and will be new even to fans. Yet Kemp's sharp, critical eye is always turned outwards, tracing his evolution across four decades at the crest of a cultural wave. Through Oberst, she cracks open millennials' fraught path to maturity, our messy obsession with authenticity and vulnerability, and our fragmented digital selves.

STARRY FIELD: A Memoir of Lost History

This poignant memoir traces 4 generations of family trauma against the backdrop of Korea's modern history for readers who love a sweeping intergenerational story like Pachinko and The Return.

Journalist and critic Margaret Juhae Lee tells the story of her search for the truth about the life and early death of her grandfather, Lee Chul Ha, a student revolutionary who was jailed for protesting the Japanese colonization of Korea in 1929.

At the end of her life, her grandmother, Halmani, opens up about Margaret's grandfather, the "criminal" who was imprisoned and a source of shame for the family. What Margaret unearths is a trove of extraordinary material concerning the life of her grandfather, information that both affirms and explodes what she had always believed about herself, her father, and their legacy. Combining investigative journalism, oral history, and archival research, Starry Field weaves together the stories of Margaret's grandparents, parents, and herself against the backdrop of Korea's tumultuous modern history, from the colonial era to its technological boom.

The moving memoir is told in a series of short chapters anchored by 3 long-form interviews Margaret conducted with Halmani before her death. Though she initially sets out to uncover the secrecy around her grandfather's life, what she finds instead is a deep bond between her and her grandmother—2 women, 2 generations apart, living on opposite sides of the world, with the shared desire to start a family and find something called home. 20 memorable photographs will be included.

"This winding investigation of long-buried family secrets succeeds." -Publishers Weekly

"Engaging, intriguing...[Starry Field is] a poignant reclamation of a hidden history, leavened by a sense of personal growth and understanding." —Kirkus Reviews

"[Lee] reminds us that even knowing where we came from won't tell us where we're going – but it will help along the way." —Susan Choi, National Book Award winning author of Trust Exercise

"With the propulsive force of a mystery... a probing, companionable tale about the search for self and home by a fiercely observant, funny, and important writer."

IOSI: The Remorseful Spy

Now an Amazon Prime series, IOSI is a gripping true crime tale of espionage, Jewish history, and antisemitic mass terrorism in 1990s Buenos Aires.

An unresolved true story that echoes today, this book shows that even after the military regime ended in Argentina and there was a civilian government, military and national police remained racist and antisemitic.

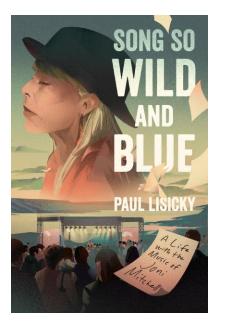

José Pérez, a young intelligence agent of the Federal Police, receives orders from his bosses to infiltrate the Argentine Jewish community by posing as a Jew. The goal is to monitor the development of an alleged Jewish plan to take over Patagonia to create a second state of Israel, known as the "Andinia Plan."

Iosi, the Hebrew name he chooses, blends in by learning the language, culture, history, religion, and politics of the Jewish people: he becomes a well-respected community leader and obtains valuable information that he passes on to his handler, the enigmatic and seductive Laura, or Red as she is called. Iosi soon understands that there is nothing suspicious going on within the Argentine Jewish community. Prone to amorous adventures, he lets himself go and falls madly in love with a young Hebrew teacher, marries her in secret and plans to convert and emigrate with her to Israel.

When the two most catastrophic terrorist attacks in Argentinian history take place, one against the Israeli embassy in 1992 and the other against Asociación Mutual Israelita Argentina (AMIA), a Jewish Community Centre in 1994, causing hundreds of deaths, Iosi grows fearful that the information he provided was used by his bosses to help organize the attacks. His bosses order him to abandon his mission and move away from Buenos Aires. But Iosi feels driven to get to the bottom of the story and he seeks out two Jewish journalists, Horacio and Miriam. Together, they strive for years to get Iosi's story told. But after initial interest, every contact they make, from supposedly honest politicians to national and international Jewish organizations, ultimately turn their backs on them. Some people are killed, others lose their jobs or are removed from the case. There is no end. This is a true story and it continues unresolved to this day.

SONG SO WILD AND BLUE: A Life with The Music of Joni Mitchell

From the celebrated novelist and memoirist Paul Lisicky, a gorgeous account of how Joni Mitchell's work has shaped his writing throughout his life.

From the moment Paul Lisicky heard Joni Mitchell while growing up in New Jersey, he recognized she was that rarity among musicians—a talent whose combination of introspection, liberation, and deep musicality set her apart from any other artist of the time. As a young man, Paul was a budding songwriter who took his cues from Mitchell's mysteries and idiosyncrasies. But as he matured, he set his guitar aside and turned to prose, a practice that would eventually take him to the Iowa Writers' Workshop and into the professional world of letters.

As the decades passed, Paul's connection to Mitchell's artistry only deepened. Joni's music was a constant, a guide to life and an artist's manual in one. As Paul navigated love and heartbreak and imaginative struggles and the vicissitudes of a creative career, he would return again and again to the lessons found in Joni's songs, to the solace and challenges that only her musicianship could give. Song So Wild and Blue is a gorgeously written, beautifully intimate, and unique tribute to the woman who shaped generations of creators and thinkers. Lisicky offers his own coming-of-adulthood as testimony to the power of songwriting and staying true to your creative vision. A guide to life that is part memoir, part biography, and part homage, Song So Wild and Blue is a joy for devoted Joni enthusiasts, budding writers, and artists of all stripes.

"Radiant ... a remarkable act of literary imagination." -Booklist, Starred Review

"A beautiful tribute to a legendary musician." -Kirkus, Starred Review

"An astonishing exploration of what it means to lead an artist's life. There is no writer more attentive than Lisicky, and to see him turn his brilliance to Joni Mitchell is a thrilling wonder." —Elizabeth McCracken, author of The Hero of This Book

"An exquisite, subtle ode to the people we used to be, and their inextricable intertwinement with the artists who change us. Lisicky's love letter to Joni Mitchell left me aglow with recognition and wonder." —Melissa Febos, bestselling author of Girlhood

BAND APART: The Women of the French New Wave

A glamorous narrative history uncovering the work of the French New Wave actresses Anna Karina, Brigitte Bardot, Jean Seberg, and Jeanne Moreau, whose revolutionary artistry has been forgotten behind the long shadows of their male directors (and, often, husbands).

The French New Wave has been remembered through its male directors, famed for elevating film from lowbrow entertainment to art. Jean Luc Godard and Francois Truffaut were cultural heroes of their time, their work in film compared to what Picasso did to painting. They are beloved and celebrated to this day for forever changing the way we make and watch movies.

Forgotten behind these men's long shadow are the women who brought their films to life. It was the verve and nonchalance of Anna Karina, Brigitte Bardot, Jean Seberg, Jean Moreau, and a dozen fellow actresses that made the New Wave so revolutionary, its charm so modern, its influence so widespread and lasting. They became international icons, at once beloved, reviled, and abused for their insistent independence. Yet their part in this sea change has been brushed aside, their strength in the face of trenchant misogyny quickly forgotten.

Recovering the courageous work and lives of these New Wave sisters, Her Life to Live spirals outwards from the dramatic narratives of Karina, Bardot, Seberg, and Moreau to paint a vibrant portrait of this remarkable community of women and their revolutionary moment. As dramatic and sensitive as Mary Gabriel's Ninth Street Women, Tove Ditlevsen's The Copenhagen Trilogy, and Sarah Bakewell's At the Existentialist Café, it is a story of courage and talent, romance and violence, survival and creation – cinematic in its own right.

BEIRUT FRAGMENTS

A New York Times Book Review Notable Book of the Year

An intensely personal yet timelessly crafted portrait of life in a war-torn city, Beirut Fragments spans the years of the civil war in Lebanon, 1975-1990. When thousands fled, Jean Said Makdisi chose to stay. She raised three sons, taught English and humanities at Beirut University College—and she wrote. She records the breakdown of society and the physical destruction of Beirut, the massacres of Sabra and Shatila, the Israeli invasion, everyday acts of terrorism, the struggle to maintain ordinary routines amid chaos, and the incredible spirit of a people.

This astounding classic, first published in 1999, rings clearly and urgently in our present moment. It is set to be reissued in the US with much fanfare in summer 2026.

"An impassioned cry against indifference...Beirut's long-suffering residents are fortunate that someone as perceptive and compassionate as Ms. Makdisi has come forward to tell their story." —The New York Times Book Review

"A profound, heartbreaking book." -Los Angeles Times Book Review

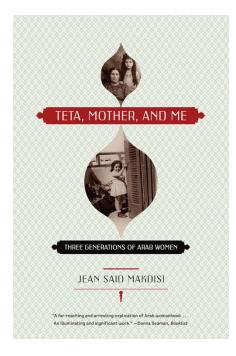

"A work ringing with truth and insight." —Arab Book World

"A beautifully crafted memoir...the first detailed account by a civilian of daily life in the cockpit of the Middle East war." —Publisher's Weekly

"Attains the vividness of a nightmare." -The New Yorker

"Jean Said Makdisi writes with riveting honesty and eloquence, incisive perception and a vision that can span both sides of the baffling road and still come up hopeful. She speaks for the dignity of citizens everywhere, beneath the headlines. Her clarity and wisdom could heal whole countries, if powerful leaders would only listen." —Naomi Shihab Nye

"An outstanding, sensitive, humane, and moving work." -Leila Ahmed

TETA, MOTHER, AND ME: Three Generations of Arab Women

A literary classic, rich in warmth and insight—and the first book written from a feminist perspective on contemporary Arab women by a contemporary Arab woman.

"Lovingly describes the locations, cultures, conflicts and social influences as they pertain to generations of women in this very impressive Arab family...insightful and thought-provoking – a window into other worlds." —Bernardine Evaristo

In this beautifully written personal and cultural history, Jean Said Makdisi illuminates a century of Arab life through the stories of her mother, Hilda Musa Said, and her grandmother, Munira Badr Musa. Against the backdrop of the fall of the Ottoman Empire, the rise of Arab nationalism, the founding of Israel, the Suez crisis, the Arab-Israeli wars, and civil war in Beirut, she reveals the extraordinary courage of these ordinary women, while overturning preconceptions of "traditional" and "modern," "East" and "West."

With a loving eye, acute intelligence, and elegant, impassioned prose, Makdisi has written much more than a memoir; Teta, Mother, and Me is a powerful embrace of history and culture, through the poignant, unsung lives of three generations of Arab women.

YOUR SELF: What It Is, Why It Malfunctions, and How It Can Work Better

While there are thousands of self-help books in the marketplace there is no popular book that explains what the self actually is—YOUR SELF changes this by offersing a sharp, witty, and holistic tour of the nested processes that make up who we are.

Based on the author's popular class at the University of Chicago YOUR SELF takes readers on a beguiling journey behind the scenes of their lived experience, peeling back the layers of the self by weaving together the most important discoveries in quantum mechanics, cellular biology, neuroscience, linguistics, behavioral science, psychology, psychedelics, and beyond, with the wisdom of our ancient traditions and modern philosophers. Offering profound ideas about what underlies the nature of being, YOUR SELF is more than just a compendium of abstract theories and scientific facts. It also explains how these notions can be applied to our ordinary lives by offering practical suggestions for living well and transcending the self, grounded by the author's own search for self-knowledge.

LET US AVOID HEARTACHE: A Natural History of Intimacy

A personal and scientific exploration of intimacy by a leading neurobiologist

Let Us Avoid Heartache braids the science of social bonding with personal narrative to deepen the reader's understanding of human intimacy and how it sits within the array of animal affections. The book will move chronologically through a human life, taking us from the physiological tensions of pregnancy to the early networks of care and play among siblings, to pair bonding and the neuroscience of romantic love, and ultimately to the site in the brain where love and grief inextricably reside. Along this journey we encounter a strange but revealing bestiary: the peculiar goose that begat attachment theory, the parenting habits of poison frogs, the alien friendships among bats, the bonding of prairie voles. And we draw close to the author, a half-Arab, gay man who grew up in poverty in the rural Midwest. The story of Steve's relationships deepen the science: his single mother who hid her pregnancy and planned to give him over to the state but for a moment of bonding, hardened childhood friends deprived of care who landed in jail, his own reluctant domestication with his partner (and dog), the aftermath of a close friend who committed suicide and the blossoming of a new friendship with the hiker who found the body.

Let Us Avoid Heartache gives us, with scientific fact and emotive force, the hows and whys of the relationships that make us who we are. They shape us indelibly before we're done growing, propel us out into the world, sustain us with all that life can throw at us, and allow us to continue when they come to an end.

WILDFIRE DAYS: A Woman, a Hotshot Crew, and the Burning American West

In the exhilarating spirit of Wild and A Walk in the Park, an adventure-filled memoir of one woman's struggle to succeed as a wildland firefighter on an elite, male-dominated crew as they battle some of the fiercest wildfires in the West.

When Kelly Ramsey drives over a California mountain pass to join an elite firefighting crew, she's terrified that she won't be able to keep up with the intense demands of the job. Not only will she be the only woman on this hotshot crew and their first in ten years, she'll also be among the oldest. As she trains relentlessly to overcome the crew's skepticism and gain their respect, megafires erupt across the West, posing an increasing danger both on the job and back home. In vivid prose that evokes the majesty of Northern California's forests, Kelly takes us on the ground to see how major wildfires are fought and to lay bare the psychological toll, the bone-deep weariness, and the unbreakable camaraderie that emerge in the face of nature's fury.

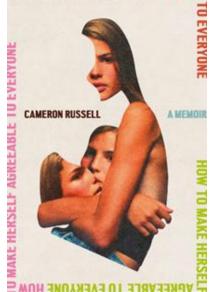

Despite the wear and tear of her rookie year in fire, Kelly gears up for a second season, determined to prove that not only can a woman survive this work, she can excel. But when her plans to marry her partner start to crumble and sparks fly with a fellow crew member, Kelly wrestles with whether she's truly outgrown the self-destructive patterns she's learned from her father, whose drinking and itinerant ways haunt her. And as the season wears on, she discovers how tenuous "belonging" can be amid everchanging crew dynamics. In this vivid, visceral, and intimate memoir, Kelly wrestles with the immense power of fire for both destruction and renewal, confronted with the questions: Which fires do you fight, and which do you let burn you clean?

"Well-written and compelling...Kelly Ramsey is that great combination of a badass and a great writer that we all strive for... She describes a riveting and wildly dangerous world that many readers will find irresistible."—Sebastian Junger, #1 New York Times bestselling author of Tribe

"Start looking, and fire is connected to everything in a landscape. But fire is also a relationship and that, as Kelly Ramsey dramatizes, can be connected to everything in a life. A lively after-action report from the swelling literature of young women and fire." —Stephen J. Pyne, author of The Pyrocene

"A frank, funny, fast-paced, and heartfelt portrait of the grueling work of wildland firefighting and the people who love it"—Ash Davidson, author of Damnation Spring

HOW TO MAKE HERSELF AGREEABLE

CAMERON RUSSELL has spent the last eighteen years working as a model. With over 38 million views and counting, she gave one of the top ten most popular TED talks of all time on the power of image. She is the recipient of the 2018 Harpers Bazaar Women of the Year Award and the GCFA's Changemaker Award, and was nominated for a Shorty Award for her work organizing models to expose systemic sexual harassment and abuse in fashion. She has twice been named model of the year by models.com, provider of the industry's most influential model rankings. In 2012 she graduated with honors from Columbia University with a degree in economics and political science.

HOW TO MAKE HERSELF AGREEABLE TO EVERYONE: A Memoir

A bold and innovative memoir that explores who holds the power in an image-obsessed culture, from the model and activist who helped organize the movement to bring equity to fashion.

By elevating me for something I have no control over, the industry and economy signal to all women: There is almost nothing you can do or create that is as valuable as how you look.

Scouted by a modeling agent when she was just sixteen years old, Cameron Russell first approached her job with some reservations: She was a serious student with her sights set on college, not the runway. But modeling was a job that seemed to offer young women like herself unprecedented access to wealth, fame, and influence. Besides, as she was often reminded, "there are a million girls in line" who would eagerly replace her.

In her powerful memoir, Russell chronicles how she learned to navigate the dizzying space between physical appearance and interiority and making money in an often-exploitative system. Being "agreeable," she found, led to more success: more bookings and more opportunities to work with the world's top photographers and biggest brands.

But as her prominence grew, Russell found that achievement under these conditions was deeply isolating and ultimately unsatisfying. Instead of freedom, she was often required to perform the role of compliant femme fatale, so she began organizing with her peers, helping to coordinate movements for labor rights, climate and racial justice, and bringing MeToo to the fashion industry. Intimate and illuminating, How to Make Herself Agreeable to Everyone is a nuanced, deeply felt memoir about beauty, complicity, and the fight for a better world.

"Fiercely intellectual, deeply vulnerable, and unapologetically honest."—Imani Perry, National Book Award-winning author of South to America

"...unique and honest... Russell doesn't just hold the door open for more voices from within fashion, she makes a compelling argument as to why they must be heard."—Christy Turlington Burns, founder and president of Every Mother Counts and model

"[How to Make Herself Agreeable to Everyone] artfully pivots toward repair and locates truths in the actual bodies, experiences, and imaginations of those who hold the clothes up... Russell's writing... will become malleable legend."—Kiese Laymon, author of Heavy

CLAIRE STAPLETON is a writer, communications consultant, and tech labor activist. After 12 years at Google, she coorganized the Google Walkout in 2018, in which 20,000 employees loudly protested the company's mishandling of sexual harassment. Today, Claire advises executives and organizations on navigating the complicated communications landscape. She speaks and writes frequently about tech worker issues, and publishes an existential advice column for tech workers on Substack. Her essay in Elle Magazine, "Google Loved Me Until I Pointed Out Everything That Sucks About It," was one of Elle.com's most-shared posts of 2019. TECH SUPPORT

From an organizer of the Google Walkouts, a funny, fast-reading memoir of one worker's journey from tech true-believer to activist for change, asking: what do you do when you wake up one day, and realize your job isn't actually good?

When a newly-graduated Claire Stapleton accepted a position at Google in 2007, she thought she had found the perfect job. The company promised not just a career path, but a mission: to do good, to connect the world, to provide a sense of value and purpose for its employees. It was the heady days of big-tech optimism, a time when it seemed like technology would help change things dramatically for the better—and also make employees rich along the way.

Starting as a junior communications staffer, Stapleton made a name for herself managing TGIF, the weekly staff meeting hosted by the founders, and her company-wide emails won her recognition as a cheerful, persuasive voice peddling company magic. Informally dubbed the "Bard of Google" and known for her consummate "Googleyness", she was soon pulled into higher-level meetings, helping to write speeches, emails, and blog posts for executives including Larry Page.

But as Stapleton's time at the company progressed, and she moved into bigger and more prestigious roles—working at the revered Google Creative Lab, and then in marketing for YouTube—she couldn't ignore the doubts that started creeping in. She could increasingly see the way that the company's stated values diverged from its practices, from the toxic workplace of the Creative Lab to the real-world harms caused by YouTube. So in 2018, when company dissatisfaction around Google's mishandling of serious sexual harassment allegations started to swell, Stapleton found herself using her voice in an altogether different fashion: to help lead the 20,000 employee Google Walkouts, a ground-breaking protest against the toxicity and exploitation of Silicon Valley culture which The New York Times would go on to call a "watershed moment in tech," and the "one of the largest worker protests in a generation." Overnight, Stapleton became a public face of tech discontent—and realized there was no going back to her life before.

TECH SUPPORT is a memoir of one worker's radicalization, a hugely smart and funny look back at a surreal era in tech, and a book that asks how we disentangle ourselves from work, when work increasingly demands our whole self. A dishy workplace memoir with bite and startling candor, TECH SUPPORT is a story about riding the big-tech roller coaster from someone who truly bought in, before she bought out with all of her might. It's also a book about grappling with the role of work in our lives, in a culture that tells us our career is who we are--and what it means to try to find a sense of identity, and power, beyond our jobs.

FREE LOVE: Adventures in Marriage and Polyamory

A wildly entertaining, authentic, and profound guide to navigating freedom and commitment, in a society intent on pinning us down.

Polyamory is having a moment. Whether you love it or hate it, the explosion of non-monogamy into the mainstream suggests a widespread frustration and stuck-ness within traditional relationship structures, perhaps especially among women and femmes, whose sexual freedom has long been contained and policed. Why do we have to choose between adventure and security? Why can't we try, at least, to have them both?

Long before its current it-girl moment, polyamory was foundational to many radical subcultures, who saw in it not only the chance for sexual freedom, but a path towards dismantling patriarchal oppression and the zero-sum game of capitalism – a path towards personal, spiritual, and collective growth, care, and empowerment. Polyamory was also foundational to the life of beloved writer and queer icon Michelle Tea, from the clandestine, ill-fated througles of her late teens, to the punk lesbian underground of 90s San Francisco, through marriage and divorce, Tinder flings and enduring friendships, heartbreak and motherhood.

In FREE LOVE, she will share these juicy, hilarious, and moving stories with her characteristic wit and charm, while delving into the radical, forgotten history of openness, and interviewing and researching widely, to guide readers through the thorny choices we make in our own relationships – poly or no. A modern-day The Ethical Slut meets Dolly Alderton's Everything I Know About Love, it marries the storytelling of Maggie Smith and Samantha Irby with the practical wisdom and heartwarming appeal of writers like Glennon Doyle, Emily Nagoski, and Vanessa Marin.

"Michelle Tea is our luminary of optimistic rebellion—sassy, astute, quicksilver, a master of the hot mess, with a legendary stature reaffirmed by wave upon wave of new readers." —Jeremy Atherton Lin, National Book Critics Circle Award-winning author of Gay Bar

STRUCTURAL ISSUES

A highly entertaining journey through why modern buildings look the way they do—and why we dislike them so much—from one of architecture's brightest and most popular writers.

Kate Wagner got an unconventional start in architecture writing when, at the age of just 23, her blog McMansion Hell went wildly viral. A scathing mixture of humor, architectural explanation, and social criticism, the blog was devoted to deconstructing the American McMansion: shoddily built, aesthetically incoherent, comically super-sized houses which look "less like a cohesive whole and more like a Frankenstein of ornate mini-houses attached to a massive garage". The project unpacked the way our deeply held ideas and values are expressed in housing, showing how the McMansion was inextricably shaped by the conditions and culture of the time.

Wagner's ascent through the world of architecture writing has continued dizzyingly from that point: at 25, her architecture column for The New Republic made her the youngest ever writer to hold such a post in the field, and she currently serves as Architecture Critic for The Nation, which has described her as the successor to the legendary critic Michael Sorkin. Wagner is now known for her unsparing, sharply funny critiques of the built environment, ranging from NYC's Vessel ("the depth of architectural thinking at work here makes a kiddie-pool seem oceanic") to windowless bedrooms ("building codes, for all their often problematic stuffiness, do exist to protect us") to towering new glass constructions ("like a bland, visible scar reminding residents of the city's gentrification").

STRUCTURAL ISSUES is a culmination of Wagner's career thinking and writing about buildings, and why those buildings so often make us unhappy. We live and work inside of architecture—it profoundly shapes our day-to-day experience, our emotional and social lives, and our world—and yet few of us truly can explain why the built environment looks and feels the way it does. Why does interior design use so much endless, mind-numbing gray now? Who on earth thought that open-floor plan offices were a good idea? Why do clothing stores feel less like spaces to buy things, and more like screechy, brand-focused "experiences" meant to be Instagrammed?

STRUCTURAL ISSUES provides a guide to understanding the way we build in the world, moving from private spaces—houses, apartment buildings, and interior design—to the public spaces many of us have come to dread. It ends in the field of architecture itself, explaining the underlying workings of a practice that so often ends up producing these dysfunctional buildings. Wagner's rejection of much of what she sees in architecture is fueled by a belief that bad architecture springs from the bad conditions in the broader world—or, as she would put it, "we build in a society". Hating architecture is also a vital expression of wanting architecture to be better, and fighting for better architecture also means fighting for a better world.

STATE OF DENIAL: AIDS and the Rise of Science Denialism

A forgotten history of the movement that sowed the seeds for the rise of science denialism around the globe, revealing the institutional failures of modern states since the 1980s.

The World Economic Forum recently named the rampant spread of disinformation as the single greatest risk that the world faces today. We saw its consequences in deaths associated with COVID denialism, in the rise of the once-marginal anti-vaccination movement, and in major public figures around the world publicly questioning long-accepted medical consensuses – including the cause of AIDS.

Where does science denialism come from, and how does it grow? Many have tried to answer this question, placing the blame variously on social media, AI, right-wing politicians, corporations, the 24-hour news cycle, a general "death of expertise." But the rise of denialism, Zafir argues, stems back much further. Turning to a science denial movement that was largely forgotten – until it was recently resurrected in Russia and by far-right politicians in the US – she uncovers the historical crossroads that lead to a broad loss of faith in institutions of authority in the late 20th century.

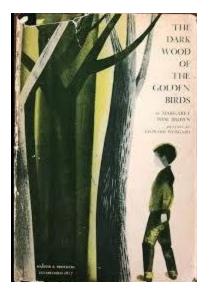

AIDS denialism, which emerged in the US and Australia in the early 1980s among the gay communities hit hardest by the pandemic – and ultimately spread across the globe, leading to an estimated 330,000 deaths in South Africa – signaled a profound transformation in our relationship to scientific authority. Tracing a compelling, untold history, Zafir unearths the profound failures of governments and institutions which fostered a climate of distrust that is still with us today.

Ultimately, Zafir argues that when we respond to misinformation by digging in our heels on the authority of experts or doubling down on the facts, we risk dangerously eliding the real messiness and uncertainty inherent in scientific knowledge production. And even more crucially, we overlook the historical shifts that have made denialism possible, from the increasing disempowerment of ordinary people, to the growing corporate dominance over all areas of modern life, to the very real failures of the neoliberal state to meet its citizens' needs.

STATE OF DENIAL is an essential corrective to the history of science denialism, and a key to understanding the turbulent years to come.

THE DARK WOOD OF THE GOLDEN BIRDS

A reprint of the classic 1950 picture book with stunning new illustrations by Ofra Amit

"As the bees come back, I will come back," said the boy.

"And my songs will be to the old man as honey of the bees

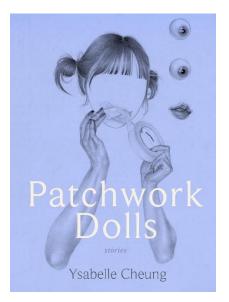

and the smell of the wild flowers carried on the wind.

I will go into the darkness of the wood

and I will come back"

Dedicated to Michael Strange, Margaret Wise Brown's longtime lover, THE DARK WOOD OF THE GOLDEN BIRDS is a picture book about an orphaned boy and girl who live with an old man on the edge of a dark wood where they can hear a golden bird sing. Against all warnings, the boy ventures into the forest from which no one has ever returned to learn the truth of the golden bird for himself.

"In the decades since, the book has fallen out of print in a culture that has no room and no language for grief, and no tolerance for the darkest dimensions of life, which crack open our vastest capacity for light. It would take an act of countercultural courage and resistance for a modern publisher to bring this work of uncommon beauty and tenderness back into the fold of life." — Maria Popova, The Marginalian

PATCHWORK DOLLS: STORIES

Set between Hong Kong and America, between the present day and an uncannily altered future, this speculative collection warps the familiar rules of our world to ask: what does it mean to be Asian, and to be a woman, living under the specter of state and technological surveillance – or trying to break free from it?

In the collection's title story, a young woman of color realizes she can make her fortune by surgically selling her facial features to whiter, wealthier clients, plunging her deep into the ethical conundrum of racial passing and the thorniness of 'selling out' women's bodies. In "Please, Get Out and Dance", a group of rebels escapes a city that is literally disappearing around them – building by building, person by person – to migrate to a new home beneath the ocean, defying their government's mandate. And "Herbs" follows an elderly widow who, when the clones of her dead husband start to appear uninvited in her home, must grapple with her memories and the question of whether it's possible to break free from the cycles of past relationships.

PATCHWORK DOLLS weaves together eerie fabulism in the tradition of Carmen Maria Machado or Kelly Link with the surrealism of Te-Ping Chen's LAND OF BIG NUMBERS and the dystopianadjacent elements of Sequoia Nagamatsu's HOW HIGH WE GO IN THE DARK. In each of these stories, Ysabelle tilts the world just slightly off its axis – moving between technology and nature, womanhood, violence, surveillance and escape – to bring together a haunting meditation on what it means to survive within our increasingly digitized and mechanized world.

"Cheung's protagonists grapple with intimacies of power from the personal to the political to the changing natural world. Yet, what draws me to these stories is not only their relevance, but their intelligent dedication to accuracy of individual feeling, no matter what the form, device, or imagination required. In other words, while these stories are set in various times, Cheung does not shy away from the present. Neither science fiction, myth, nor magical realism, but some amalgamation of it all, Please Get Out and Dance offers fugitive possibilities against the hauntings of our historical moment." —Yanyi, author of Dream of the Divided Field and The Year of Blue Water

"With grace and precision, Ysabelle Cheung conjures up uncanny worlds... that cove[r] a full spectrum of human emotions resting underneath a glaze of unreality. A startling debut with evocative haunting tales that evoke Angela Carter, Kazuo Ishiguro, and Carmen Maria Machado; I devoured this book in one sitting." —Karen Cheung, author of The Impossible City

DAVID DABEL was born in Port-au-Prince, Haiti. He grew up speaking French Creole, and hearing of the amazing adventures and bravery that led to the freedom of his people. In the past, David has worked in partnership with his brothers to establish Dabel Brothers Productions, through which they created graphic novel adaptations with authors such as George R.R. Martin, Robert Jordan, Dean Koontz, and more. Some of these projects went on to become New York Times Best Sellers for upwards of nine weeks, and their title The Dresden Files: Welcome to the Jungle was nominated for a Hugo Award.

THE CURSE OF MONTE CRISTO

Journey to the beginnings of the bloody days of the Haitian Revolution, with a classic tale of revenge and reclamation, reimagined with a horror twist, in the graphic novel The Curse of Monte Cristo.

France, 1788. Edmond Dantès, a Haitian of African descent and Parisian citizen has been sentenced to a life of hell at Château d'If for treason against the Ancien Régime. Once a man of faith, Edmond believes he's been abandoned by God, and the only thing that keeps him going is his deep hatred of those who he believes have framed him. Faria, an older prisoner who becomes a mentor to Edmond, confesses, "I am not flesh of this realm. Your lust for revenge drew me here."

Together, they escape the prison and return to Saint Domingue, where the smell of rebellion is thick in the air. Edmond, once an enslaved man himself, thought he had escaped the colonized land and his past life for good, only to return as the wealthy and mysterious Count of Monte Cristo. In pursuit of his enemies – including Mercedes, once his fiancée – he finds his careful rage growing only more reckless and ravenous. Haydee, a young revolutionist, tries to use his fury for good, while Faria, drunk off the misery Edmond has caused, hungers for the fresh taste of innocent blood. As Edmond's enemies begin to catch on to the count's true identity, and the fight for liberation from the French colonists swells to a pop, Edmond must reckon with the deal he's made with Faria. Is it any more sinister – or any different – than the pact he's made with his own inner demons?

"This reimagined version of a classic is such a clever and entertaining mash-up of genres that I suspect Dabel and Holder are from an alternate universe where Alexandre Dumas wrote it this way. Kudos as well to the letterist and illustrator, Lentz and Catraca, who were obviously inspired." —Dean Koontz

NOW I SURRENDER TO YOU AND THAT IS ALL

"Álvaro Enrigue... belongs to many literary traditions at once and shows a great mastery of them all" —Carlos Fuentes

In NOW I SURRENDER TO YOU AND THAT IS ALL, his sweeping nineteenth century epic set in the shadows of the Mexican War of Independence, Herralde Prize winner (SUDDEN DEATH) Álvaro Enrigue chronicles the last days of the Apache Wars in this searching tale of conquest and resistance.

When the Apaches abduct Camila Ezguerra, a young widow from a northern outpost in the state of Chihuahua, this act of revenge sets off a search throughout the territory by a ragtag army of the nascent Mexican state. At the helm of this band of motley soldiers is Lieutenant Coronel Jose Maria Zuloaga, a Quixote of the Old West, whose troops include a gun-toting nun, an elderly dance teacher and a twin pair of freed Yaqui prisoners riding across the vast Apache territory in search of the abducted woman. As the story of Zuloaga and the Apaches unfolds, the novel telegraphs forward a half a century to Geronimo's last stand againnow st the US Army, and the curious allegiances and intrigues American officials that lead to Geronimo's capture. Uniting these strands is a mystery at the center of the novel in the form of Camila and her ultimate transformation as she and her captors travel deep into Apache territory.

In this magisterial novel, Enrigue plumbs the depths of the North American imaginary of the Old West through a series of reversals that defy the narrative of cowboys and Indians, saviors and saved, Mexicans and Americans.

In turn brutal, tender, comic, and utterly masterful, THE BOOK OF GERONIMO displays Enrigue's, penchant for the absurd and keen eye for the bloody history of the Americas. THE BOOK OF GERONIMO is a revisionist Western for our age.

Praise for SUDDEN DEATH:

"Engrossing ... rich with Latin and European history." -The New Yorker

GOODNIGHT, SLEEP TIGHT

The Millions, "Most Anticipated Books of Fall 2024" Literary Hub, "Most Anticipated Books of 2024" SIBA Read This Next! September Pick Chicago Review of Books September Must-Read

From the "master of literary horror" (GQ) comes a collection of new stories tracing the limits and consequences of artificial intelligence and "post-human" relationships. Populated by twins stepping into worlds of absence, bears who lick their cubs into creation, and artificial beings haunted by their less-than-human nature, each page sketches a world where our all-too-real feelings of isolation and ecological dread take on an otherworldly tinge.

In Good Night, Sleep Tight, Brian Evenson deftly weaves ethical dilemmas, maternal warmth, and echoes of apocalypse into his most tender, disquieting book yet.

Praise for Goodnight, Sleep Tight:

"This collection of unsettling stories blurs the lines between dream and reality, life and death, human and not, Bradbury and Borges." —Kirkus Reviews

"The prolific master of the eerie and strange can terrify and delight at any length, but his story collections are always a feast for any reader. If you've never read Evenson but are a fan of George Saunders, Ray Bradbury, Jorge Luis Borges... now's the time to rectify your mistake." —Literary Hub

Praise for Brian Evenson:

"There is not a more intense, prolific, or apocalyptic writer of fiction in America than Brian Evenson." —George Saunders

"Evenson is one of our best living writers-regardless of genre." -NPR

"Evenson's fiction is equal parts obsessive, experimental, and violent. It can be soul-shaking." —The New Yorker

LOVE IS A DANGEROUS WORD: Selected Poems of Essex Hemphill

The incendiary, sensual poems of Essex Hemphill, now in a new landmark selection

For three decades, the legacy of writer, editor, performer, and activist Essex Hemphill has been lovingly sustained through xeroxed copies of his few published works. They are as potent now as they were in the 1980s. With tenderness and rage, Hemphill's poems unflinchingly explore the complex, overlapping identities of sexuality, gender, and race, the American political landscape, and his own experiences as a black gay man during the HIV/AIDS crisis.

Edited by John Keene and Robert F. Reid-Pharr, Love is a Dangerous Word contains selections from Hemphill's only published full-length collection, Ceremonies—named one of the 25 most influential works of postwar queer literature by the New York Times—alongside rarely seen poems from magazines and chapbooks. It serves as both an introduction to Hemphill's poetic prowess and a treasure trove for those who have long awaited his return to the literary spotlight.

"When I read a poet like Essex Hemphill, my heart just comes up in my mouth and does an African folkdance on the back of my throat....He's making something that has never been made or said before. He gives me hope and strength."—Audre Lorde

"If I'd met him I guess I'd have just said thank you."-Dev Hynes

Praise for CEREMONIES:

"Astounding. No voice speaks with more eloquent, thought-provoking clarity about contemporary Black gay life than that of Essex Hemphill" — Marlon Riggs

"The prose sings with lyricism, the poetry sears with content. Hemphill is like an Old Testament prophet, exhorting us with ethical passion. He is exactly what we need at this hour." —Martin Duberman

"This collection of poems, prose and essays by Essex Hemphill is my go-to carry-around book. It includes words of wonder, sadness and critique all centered around the black gay experience — especially heightened within the AIDS epidemic." —Dev Hynes, (aka Blood Orange)

IT'S HARD TO BE AN ANIMAL

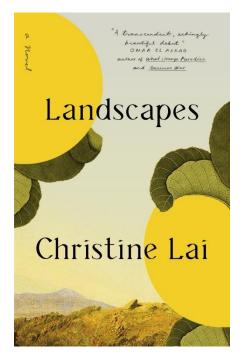

Henry Parsons is walking through Central Park on a date with Molly Bent, the quirky, sweet, and endlessly interesting woman that his colleague set him up with. After a long spell of loneliness, he is feeling hopeful for the first time in years when a sweet little warbler tells him to f off.

A gentle soul already troubled by the rancor and insensitivity of humans in the city, Henry tries to brush it off as a hallucination. But suddenly he can hear the voices everywhere: dogs mocking their owners, sparrows fat-shaming each other, snakes pontificating about misogyny and gender politics, police horses profiling attendees of a street fair: the man who never speaks up for himself is suddenly surrounded by animals who do.

It's all fun and games until he overhears three rats discussing a corpse in the New York subway. Unsure what to do, he lets it slip to Molly. She's keen to investigate, and Henry is desperate for another date. Together they descend into an abandoned tunnel under the West Fourth Street station where they find a body... and the murderers find them.

For the first time in Henry's careful life there's no way to duck confrontation: he's being hunted, and must find the courage to face the Scottish gangsters stalking him across the city. Of course, that same assertiveness might transform his chances with Molly too. Inspiration arrives, unexpectedly, from his roommate's pair of feuding beta fish on an enemies-to-lovers arc, and the neighbor's yapping Pomeranian whose wisdom changes Henry forever.

IT'S HARD TO BE AN ANIMAL is an upmarket love story and cozy mystery with a strong thread of magical realism for readers of Carl Hiaasen's SQUEEZE ME looking for a bit more tenderness, or of Shelby Van Pelt's REMARKABLY BRIGHT CREATURES.

LANDSCAPES

An entrancing and prismatic debut novel, set in a near future fraught with ecological collapse, Landscapes brilliantly explores memory, empathy, preservation, and art as an instrument for recollection and renewal.

In the English countryside—decimated by heat and drought—Penelope archives what remains of an estate's once notable collection. The dilapidated country house has been her home for two decades and a refuge for those who have been displaced by disasters. But out of necessity, Penelope and her partner, Aidan, have sold the house and its scheduled demolition marks the pressing deadline for completing the archive. With it comes the impending return of Aidan's brother, Julian, at whose hands Penelope suffered during a brief, violent relationship twenty-two years before. As Julian's visit looms, Penelope finds herself unable to suppress the past, and she clings to art as a means of understanding, of survival, and of reckoning.

Recalling the works of Rachel Cusk and Kazuo Ishiguro, Landscapes is an elegiac and spellbinding blend of narrative, essay, and diary that reinvents the pastoral and the country house novel for our age of catastrophe, and announces the arrival of an extraordinarily gifted new writer.

BABY NOTHING

The novel's narrator—a genderless, nameless, underemployed dancer whose "fun fact" is that they were kidnapped from the maternity ward soon after their birth—works as a housekeeper on the private island of Zeke Folsom-Fox, a psychic huckster who claims to use the entrails of jellyfish that wash up on shore to warn the island's vacationers, all members of the gay 1%, of imminent catastrophes. Alone on the island at the end of the season, the narrator turns the task of closing up the island for the winter into a performance art piece, wherein they must clean the thirteen houses in one day with their eyes closed.

Their project is interrupted when the narrator finds an abandoned baby covered in her own filth in one of the houses. The discovery forces the narrator into another sort of score, with new rules: caring for a baby whose fathers never return to retrieve her, on an island with dwindling food supply and no phone service, with no hope of escape when the boat meant to retrieve the narrator never arrives.

They are near death when the island is engulfed in flames as the result of an electrical fire—a catastrophe large enough to bring rescue in the form of Miguel, another of Zeke's wayward employees, who lives on his houseboat rent free. Unwilling to part ways with the baby, the narrator's role shifts from helpless, shiftless artist, to de facto parent and kidnapper, as the three of them sail into the sunset—away from Zeke and his shady business deals, the mystery shrouding the baby's possibly-murdered fathers Clark and Kent, and the familial bonds and structures that held each of them to shore.

Combining the lambast of extreme wealth seen in Emma Cline's THE GUEST, and the sensitivity and absurdity of Henry Hoke's OPEN THROAT, BABY NOTHING explores various modes of performance: dance, domestic labor, childcare, gender and self definition, the responsibilities of friendship, and the stories we repeat about our past in searing, searching prose.

WORK NIGHTS

"I inhaled this book." —Anna Dorn, author of Perfume & Pain

"A voice I'd follow into the abyss." -Jean Kyoung Frazier, author of Pizza Girl

A young queer woman finds herself in a love triangle with an unobtainable intern and a quick-tempered musician in this charming debut that combines Big Swiss with The Devil Wears Prada.

Every weekday, Jane Grabowski hauls herself to her nine-to-five office job at New York City's most acclaimed newspaper to sit in stale air under severe florescent lights and mask her rage by sending emails with too many exclamation points. Luckily, she has a reason to keep coming into the office: Madeline, the distractingly beautiful intern. Madeline has never dated a woman and is uncomfortable with labels, but with carefully timed lunch breaks and painstakingly crafted texts, Jane works her way into her life.

But Jane's free-spirited artist roommate is determined to keep her from falling for a straight girl. She drags Jane out to gay bars and queer Shabbat dinners, where she meets the decidedly uncool and morally righteous musician, Addy. Caught between Addy's readiness to commit and Madeline's alluring unpredictability, Jane is pulled down a slippery path of lies and deceit, leading to a plane ticket that threatens to take everything down in one fell swoop.

"Reminds me, I swear to god, of my favorite piece of literature, Nathaniel Hawthorne's 'The Custom House.' And this is as cool as that. Better." —Eileen Myles, author of Chelsea Girls

"I read this book in one sitting, shut it, and immediately said to myself 'yeah, this one will ruin the bisexuals." Unpleasant, exhilarating and I'd earnestly do it all again—even though Jane would never call me back." —Haley Jakobson, author of Old Enough

LETTERS TO ANOTHER HOME

North Korea, 1950: Oksoon believes that the war is finally over in Pyeongyang. The Americans are here to stay, she's told, but her father and eldest brother have gone south and she anxiously waits for their return. When the Chinese army unexpectedly attacks, Oksoon must flee with her mother and second brother in search of safety and to reunite their family. Journeying from freezing winter in the rural north to the seedy back alleys of Seoul during the summer, Oksoon and her family fall in with an unlikely group of miscreants – a prostitute, a baduk gambler, an opportunistic ferryman – and question how far they'll go, and what moral boundaries they'll cross, to find their missing relatives.

Meanwhile, far to the south near Jinju, Oksoon's close cousin Junho flees the war to find refuge at the Lord's Beloved Home for Children. As the orphanage struggles to keep its doors open, Junho is put in charge of drafting letters to rich American benefactors, convincing them to send money to Korea. But when the enigmatic orphanage director brings her aristocratic niece to stay at the Home – a beautiful young woman harboring a secret – Junho finds himself caught between his impulse for survival and his growing affections, which put him at risk of being expelled from the only safe place he knows.

As Oksoon and Junho make their way towards each other and eventually unite, they fight to save themselves and hold their family together, even as the war threatens to tear everything apart. Told in alternating points of view, LETTERS TO ANOTHER HOME highlights the tension between personal dreams and duty to family, the power of resilience, and how choices made in a brief moment have consequences that reverberate for lifetimes. It combines the intergenerational scope of Nguyen Phan Que Mai's THE MOUNTAINS SING with the coming-of-age focus found in Asha Lemmie's FIFTY WORDS FOR RAIN, telling a powerful story about what it means to build a life for yourself and your family against all odds.

EVIL EYES SEA

A Guardian Best Graphic Novel of 2024

A feminist political mystery set in Istanbul during the 1995 elections tells the story of two broke students who witnessed an unusual death on a scuba diving expedition. As the case deepens, they become increasingly entangled with political corruption, religious pressure, and possibly murder.

They try to return to their every day, but their lives are increasingly entangled with the political corruption, religious pressure, and economic instability that results from their experience. Samanci says, "The autobiographically inspired story I tell in Evil Eyes Sea emerged from my college years in Istanbul, my quirky friends, and my struggles with being a young woman in Turkey's male-centric culture. In this book, I share a window into a country where narrow political views limit personal power—a place that can be beautiful, but also cruel."

"Try as they might, Ece and Meltem, students in 1990s Istanbul, can't get over the underwater accident they witnessed. Wrangling with the misogyny of college life and the chain of an upcoming election, eventually, they realize that maybe they shouldn't."—The New York Times, Book Review

"In this rambunctious murder mystery set in 1990s Turkey, Samancı (Dare to Disappoint) contrasts a playful and vibrant visual style with deadly serious themes."—Publishers Weekly

"As entertaining as it is exposing, Samanci's sophomore title is an exquisite, multilayered showpiece confronting gender inequity, religious manipulations, political corruption, and the gray zones of morals and ethics—gray zones necessary for survival."—Booklist, STARRED REVIEW

"Evil Eyes Sea is a work that turns its powerful, Medusa-like gaze on womanhood, corruption, and moral responsibility while still being an entertaining, fast-paced read. Taking the plunge into its watery depths is a rewarding experience."—The Third Coast Review

"Scuba meets stone cold corruption in EVIL EYES SEA."-The Beat

RULES FOR GHOSTING

National Bestseller A New York Times Best Romance Novel of 2024

Ezra Friedman sees ghosts, which made growing up in a funeral home complicated. It might have been easier if his grandfather's ghost didn't give him scathing looks of disapproval as he went through a second, HRT-induced puberty, or if he didn't have the pressure of all those relatives—living and dead—judging every choice he makes. It's no wonder that Ezra runs as far away from the family business as humanly possible.

But when the floor of his dream job drops out from under him and his mother uses the family Passover seder to tell everyone she's running off with the rabbi's wife, Ezra finds himself back in the thick of it. With his parents' marriage imploding and the Friedman Family Memorial Chapel on the brink of financial ruin, Ezra agrees to step into his mother's shoes and help out . . . which means long days surrounded by ghosts that no one else can see.

And then there's his unfortunate crush on Jonathan, the handsome funeral home volunteer . . . who just happens to live downstairs from Ezra's new apartment . . . and the appearance of the ghost of Jonathan's gone-too-soon husband, Ben, who is breaking every spectral rule that Ezra knows. Because Ben can speak. He can move. And as Ezra tries to keep his family together and his heart from getting broken, he realizes that there's more than one way to be haunted—and more than one way to become a ghost.

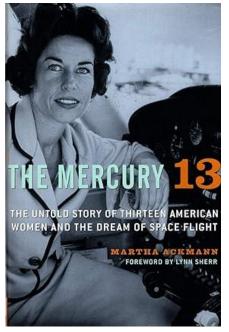

"As unabashedly queer as it is loudly and beautifully Jewish, Rules for Ghosting is one of the most unique, poignant novels I've read in a long, long time." —Carlyn Greenwald, author of SIZZLE REEL

"Jewish family drama and a tender romance combine to tug at the heartstrings and leave readers sighing happily."—Booklist

"The kind of book you want to live in...I'd read a million pages about Ezra Friedman and still be left wanting more."—Haley Jakobson, author of Old Enough

THE MERCURY 13: The True Story of Thirteen Women and the Dream of Space Flight

The Mercury 13 reveals the little-known true story of the remarkable women who trained for NASA space flight.

In 1961, just as NASA launched its first man into space, a group of women underwent secret testing in the hopes of becoming America's first female astronauts. They passed the same battery of tests at the legendary Lovelace Foundation as did the Mercury 7 astronauts, but they were summarily dismissed by the boys' club at NASA and on Capitol Hill. The USSR sent its first woman into space in 1963; the United States did not follow suit for another twenty years.

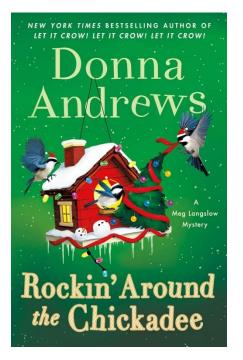

For the first time, Martha Ackmann tells the story of the dramatic events surrounding these thirteen remarkable women, all crackerjack pilots and patriots who sometimes sacrificed jobs and marriages for a chance to participate in America's space race against the Soviet Union. In addition to talking extensively to these women, Ackmann interviewed Chuck Yeager, John Glenn, Scott Carpenter, and others at NASA and in the White House with firsthand knowledge of the program, and includes here never-before-seen photographs of the Mercury 13 passing their Lovelace tests.

Despite the crushing disappointment of watching their dreams being derailed, the Mercury 13 went on to extraordinary achievement in their lives: Jerrie Cobb dedicated her life to flying solo missions to the Amazon rain forest; Wally Funk went on to become one of the first female FAA investigators; Janey Hart had the political savvy to steer the women through congressional hearings and later helped found the National Organization for Women.

A provocative tribute to these extraordinary women, The Mercury 13 is an unforgettable story of determination, resilience, and inextinguishable hope.

ROCKIN' AROUND THE CHICKADEE

Bells are ringing and alarms are sounding in Donna Andrews' latest cheery addition in the New York Times bestselling Meg Langslow series.

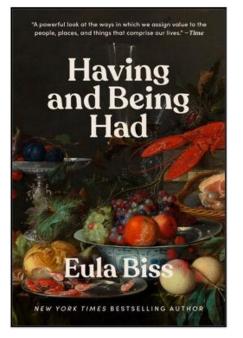

Meg's sister-in-law, Delaney, is pregnant. Since her due date is on or around Christmas Day, this is putting a bit of a damper on the usual holiday festivities. Meg and Michael are NOT hosting the usual house full of relatives and parties. Instead, Meg, along with her mother, her grandmother, her cousin Rose Noire, and her good friend Caroline, are militantly doing everything they can think of to keep Delaney quiet and healthy. All the relatives are farmed out to friends and neighbors; all the parties are being held somewhere else; and while Delaney is bored and mutinous, she's doing well, and they're managing to maintain a serene, peaceful environment for her . . . until a body is found in Meg and Michael's yard.

The body turns out to be an attendee at Presumed Innocent, a nearby conference that Meg's grandmother has organized. Some of the attendees want to learn how to exonerate a friend or family members who has been unjustly convicted, while the rest are avid true crime aficionados. And since the dead guy has been very vocal about his belief that most actual and would-be exonerees are guilty, guilty GUILTY!, nearly everyone at the conference dislikes him. But would any of them hate him enough to kill him? And can Meg still keep Delaney calm in the middle of a murder investigation, all while trying to catch the killer?

Praise for the Meg Langslow Mysteries series:

"If you long for more fun mysteries, a la Janet Evanovich, you'll love Donna Andrews's Meg Langslow series." —Charlotte Observer

"A long-running series that gets better all the time. A fine blend of academic satire, screwball comedy, and murder." —Booklist

HAVING AND BEING HAD

 SOLD IN A 12 PUBLISHER AUCTION

A timely and arresting new look at affluence by a consistently surprising writer

"My adult life can be divided into two distinct parts," Eula Biss writes, "the time before I owned a washing machine and the time after." Having just purchased her first home, she now embarks on a roguish and risky self-audit of the value system she has bought into. The result is a radical interrogation of work, leisure, and capitalism. Described by The New York Times as a writer who "advances from all sides, like a chess player," Biss brings her approach to the lived experience of capitalism. Playfully ranging from IKEA to Beyoncé to Pokemon, across bars and laundromats and universities, she asks, of both herself and her class, "In what have we invested?"

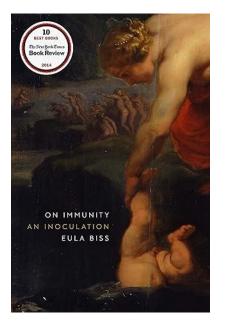

A NEW YORK TIMES EDITORS' CHOICE NAMED A BEST BOOK OF THE YEAR BY TIME, NPR, INSTYLE, AND GOOD HOUSEKEEPING

"A sensational book . . . Keenly aware of her privilege as a white, well-educated woman who has benefited from a wide network of family and friends, Biss has written a book that is, in effect, the opposite of capitalism in its willingness to acknowledge that everything she's accomplished rests on the labor of others." —Associated Press

"Incisive, impressive and often poetic . . . [Biss] turns what is essentially a chronicle of white guilt and anxious privilege into a thoughtful and nuanced meditation on the compromises inherent in having a comfortable life." —The Wall Street Journal

"[Biss explores] the candid ways we reveal our own biases around money, class, wealth, property & work. . . . Having and Being Had is a reminder that even discussing our contemporary chaos is an act of awakening & a call to action." —Los Angeles Times

"A major achievement. Having and Being Had, rather than leading through narrative, turns individual words and phrases, like capitalism, consumers, great America, husbandry, art, and work, into fields of inquiry in order to frame a life. With astute consideration, this expansive and intimate accumulation asks the questions that touch all our lives." — Claudia Rankine, author of Citizen

ON IMMUNITY: An Inoculation

A New York Times Book Review Top 10 Book of the Year A National Book Critics Circle Award Finalist

In this bold, fascinating book, Eula Biss addresses our fear of the government, the medical establishment, and what may be in our children's air, food, mattresses, medicines, and vaccines. Reflecting on her own experience as a new mother, she suggests that we cannot immunize our children, or ourselves, against the world. As she explores the metaphors surrounding immunity, Biss extends her conversations with other mothers to meditations on the myth of Achilles, Voltaire's Candide, Bram Stoker's Dracula, Rachel Carson's Silent Spring, Susan Sontag's AIDS and Its Metaphors, and beyond. On Immunity is an inoculation against our fear and a moving account of how we are all interconnected-our bodies and our fates.

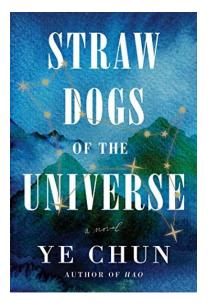

BEST BOOK OF THE YEAR SELECTIONS: Entertainment Weekly (top 10), New York Magazine (top 10), Toronto Globe & Mail, Chicago Tribune (top 10), Publishers Weekly (top 10), Time Out New York (top 10), Los Angeles Times * Kirkus, Booklist, NPR's "Science Friday", Slate (top 15), Newsday, Refinery29... and more.

"On Immunity is a book I've recommended too many times to count—a searching, empathetic, ultimately unassailable argument, not just for vaccination but for thoroughly acknowledging our interdependence, and for all that becomes necessary and possible once we do. Written before COVID, it nonetheless speaks directly to the concerns of the pandemic era—to the fact that we are dangerous as well as vulnerable, to the way collective well-being and individual self-interest are configured at odds to one another when they are fundamentally intertwined."

—Jia Tolentino

"Subtle, spellbinding . . . Sontag said she wrote Illness as Metaphor to 'calm the imagination, not to incite it,' and On Immunity also seeks to cool and console . . . [Biss] advances from all sides, like a chess player, drawing on science, myth, literature to herd us to the only logical end, to vaccinate." —Parul Sehgal, The New York Times Book Review

"On Immunity . . . weaves metaphor and myth, science and sociology, philosophy and politics into a tapestry rich with insight and intelligence." —Jerome Groopman, The New York Review of Books

STRAW DOGS OF THE UNIVERSE

A harrowing and redemptive immigrant story for readers of Pachinko

A sweeping historical novel of the American West from the little-seen perspective of those who helped to build it, STRAW DOGS OF THE UNIVERSE traces the story of one Chinese father and his young daughter, desperate to find him against all odds.

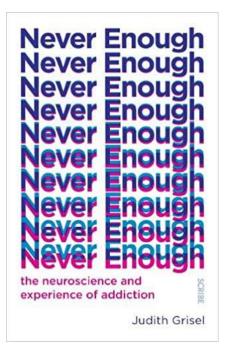

After her village is devastated by famine, 10-year-old Sixiang is sold to a human trafficker for a bag of rice and six silver coins. Her mother is reluctant to let her go, but the promise of a better life for her beloved daughter ultimately sways her. Arriving in America with the profits from her sale and a single photograph of Guifeng, her absent father, Sixiang journeys across an unfamiliar American landscape in the hopes of reuniting her family.

As she makes her way through an unforgiving new world, her father, a railroad worker in California, finds his attempts to build a life for himself both upended and defined by a long-lost love and the seemingly inescapable violence of the American West. A generational saga ranging from the villages of China to the establishment of the transcontinental railroad and the anti-Chinese movement in California, Straw Dogs of the Universe considers the tenacity of family ties and the courage it takes to survive in a country that rejects you, even as it relies upon your labor.

Longlisted for the Andrew Carnegie Medals of Excellence A Washington Post A Best Fiction Book of the Year An Indie Next Selection

"Hauntingly beautiful and exquisitely written, Straw Dogs of the Universe shines much-needed light on a historical period that we must not forget if we want to do better as a human race. NEVER ENOUGH: The Neuroscience and Experience of Addiction

A New York Times Bestseller

From a renowned behavioral neuroscientist and recovering addict, a rare page-turning work of science that draws on personal insights to reveal how drugs work, the dangerous hold they can take on the brain, and the surprising way to combat today's epidemic of addiction.

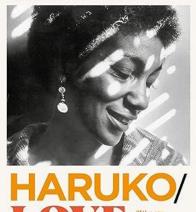

Judith Grisel was a daily drug user and school dropout when she began to consider that her addiction might have a cure, one that she herself could discover by studying the brain. Now, in NEVER ENOUGH, after twenty-five years as a neuroscientist, she shares what she and other scientists have learned about addiction: how all drugs act on the brain, the different kinds of effects different drugs generate, and the specific reasons why many are so hard to kick. Grisel reveals what is different about the brains of addicts even before they first pick up a drink or drug, highlights the changes that take place in the brain and behavior as a result of chronic using, and shares the surprising hidden gifts that addiction can expose.

With more than one in every five people over the age of fourteen addicted, drug abuse has been called the most formidable health problem worldwide. Urgent, revelatory, and set apart by its personal insights and captivating storytelling, NEVER ENOUGH will inform a more coherent and compassionate response to the epidemic in our homes and communities.

"Grisel's account of her wayward early 20s, chasing one high after another, is harrowing . . . She writes clearly and unsparingly about both her experiences and the science of addiction—tobacco and caffeine figure in, as well—making plain that there is still much that remains unknown or mysterious about the brain's workings. . . . Illuminating reading for those seeking to understand the whos, hows, and wherefores of getting hooked." —Kirkus Reviews

"The science behind addiction comes alive in its sorrow and grandeur. When you pick up this book get ready for an intense ride." —Paul H. Earley, M.D., DFASAM; President-elect, American Society of Addiction Medicine

HARUKO/LOVE POEMS

Searingly beautiful poems about compassion, resistance and desire by an iconic Black American activist and writer, with a foreword by Adrienne Rich

In trailblazing poet, essayist, teacher and activist June Jordan's poems, love is a vision of revolutionary solidarity, crossing borders both emotional and literal with an outstretched hand. Haruko traces the faltering arc of a passionate love affair with another woman while Love Poems encompasses relationships with men and women, political resistance, the need for self-care in a demanding, uncaring world and apocalyptic visions of the eruption of Mount Vesuvius that destroyed Pompeii and Herculaneum.

A contemporary of Alice Walker, Toni Morrison and Audre Lorde, June Jordan's spectacular poetry remains profoundly politically potent, lyrically inventive and breathtakingly romantic. First published in 1994, Haruko/Love Poems is a vitally important modern classic.

PRAISE FOR JUNE JORDAN:

"Poetry that looks as closely into lilac buds as into death's mouth...Flawless art." -Toni Morrison

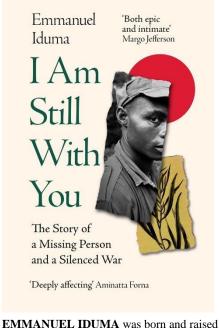

"She is the bravest of us, the most outraged. She feels for us all. She is the universal poet." —Alice Walker

"A writer of integrity and will." -Darryl Pinckney, The New York Times

"The poetry of June Jordan is fully alive, set free in brilliant, timeless flight." - The Guardian

"Her lifelong devotion to justice, equality, and radical democracy seemed to revolve around the pleasure she felt in hurling beautiful words at a world full of racism, poverty, homophobia and inane politicians...There was always joy in her rage." —Angela Davis

"A poet of the people ... The legacy of June Jordan is a gift to us in that it allows another opportunity to think not only about what poems are, but also about what poems can do." —Jericho Brown

I AM STILL WITH YOU: The Story of a Missing Person in the Nigerian Civil War

Finalist for the Hurston/Wright Legacy Award *A New Yorker, TIME, and Vulture Best Book of the Year*

An astonishing search for the author's disappeared uncle and the hidden tragedies of a war that shaped him, his family and a nation

Emmanuel Iduma never met his uncle, the man for whom he was named. The elder Emmanuel left home in 1967 to fight in the Biafra War and was not seen again. The war lasted for three years, with young Igbo men volunteering to fight for a breakaway republic in the chaotic wake of British decolonization. Around one hundred thousand disappeared like Emmanuel's uncle, though there are no official records of these losses. The tensions that gave rise to the conflict remain live today, threatening sometimes to bubble over. In this landscape, there are no monuments or graves. Instead, a collective remembering that largely remains silent.

I Am Still With You sees a young Nigerian return to his place of birth. Travelling the route of the war, Iduma explores a national history and the mysteries of his own family, finding both scarred and haunted, the memories warped by time and the darkest parts left for decades unspoken. In intimate, lyrical prose, he shares a deeply moving story of collective loss and making peace with the unknowable.

NAMED A BEST BOOK OF THE YEAR BY THE NEW YORKER, TIME, AND VULTURE

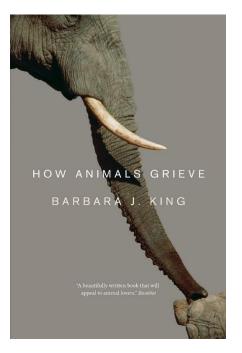

"A poignant story rescued from silences and lacunae." -Kirkus Review starred review

"Brilliant...blends travelogue, reportage, criticism, memoir, and history in a hypnotic tale." -Vulture

"A thorough and thoughtful reporter, Iduma uses his family's own tragedy to tell the devastating story of a country that has not been allowed to properly mourn its dead." —TIME Magazine

"This adroitly crafted work seeks closure for 'a generation that has to lift itself from the hushes and gaps of the history of war.." —The New Yorker

"In clear, elegiac prose, Iduma's search leads to an affecting conclusion." -The New Statesman

HOW ANIMALS GRIEVE

From the time of our earliest childhood encounters with animals, we casually ascribe familiar emotions to them. But scientists have long cautioned against such anthropomorphizing, arguing that it limits our ability to truly comprehend the lives of other creatures. Recently, however, things have begun to shift in the other direction, and anthropologist Barbara J. King is at the forefront of that movement, arguing strenuously that we can—and should—attend to animal emotions. With How Animals Grieve, she draws our attention to the specific case of grief, and relates story after story—from fieldsites, farms, homes, and more—of animals mourning lost companions, mates, or friends.

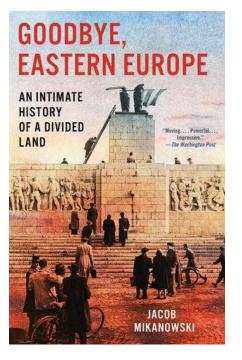

King tells of elephants surrounding their matriarch as she weakens and dies, and, in the following days, attending to her corpse as if holding a vigil. A housecat loses her sister, from whom she's never before been parted, and spends weeks pacing the apartment, wailing plaintively. A baboon loses her daughter to a predator and sinks into grief. In each case, King uses her anthropological training to interpret and try to explain what we see—to help us understand this animal grief properly, as something neither the same as nor wholly different from the human experience of loss.

The resulting book is both daring and down-to-earth, strikingly ambitious even as it's careful to acknowledge the limits of our understanding. Through the moving stories she chronicles and analyzes so beautifully, King brings us closer to the animals with whom we share a planet, and helps us see our own experiences, attachments, and emotions as part of a larger web of life, death, love, and loss.

"Touching and provocative." -Kari Weil, Washington Post

"Makes a powerful case for the presence of love, affection, and grief in animals—from a house cat mourning her lost sister to elephants who pay respects to the bones of their matriarchs." -NPR

"King attempts to walk the tightrope of scientific rigor while accepting that non-human animals can have emotions...She has written a challenging book that implies big questions about who we are and how we choose to live." — Simon Barnes, The Times

GOODBYE, EASTERN EUROPE: An Intimate History of a Divided Land

In light of Russia's aggressive 2022 invasion of Ukraine, Goodbye, Eastern Europe is a crucial, elucidative read, a sweeping epic chronicling a thousand years of strife, war, and bloodshed, from pre-Christianity to the fall of Communism—illuminating the remarkable cultural significance and richness of a place perpetually lost to the margins of history.

Eastern Europe, the moniker, has gone out of fashion since the fall of the Soviet Union. Ask someone now, and they might tell you that Estonia is in the Baltics, or Scandinavia, that Slovakia is in Central Europe and Croatia is in the Eastern Adriatic or the Balkans. In fact, Eastern Europe is a place that barely exists at all, except in cultural memory. Yet it remains a powerful marker of identity for many, with a fragmented and wide history, defined by texts, myths, and memories of centuries of hardship and suffering.

Goodbye, Eastern Europe is a masterful narrative about a place that has survived the brink of being forgotten. Beginning with long-lost accounts of early pagan life, Mikanowski offers a kaleidoscopic tour recounting the rise and fall of the great empires—Ottoman, Hapsburg, and Russian—the dawn of the modern era, the ravages of Fascism and Communism, as well as Capitalism, the birth of the modern nation-state, and more. A student of literature, history, and the ghosts of his own family's past, Mikanowski paints a magisterial portrait of a place united by diversity, and eclecticism, and a people with the shared story of being the dominated rather than the dominating.

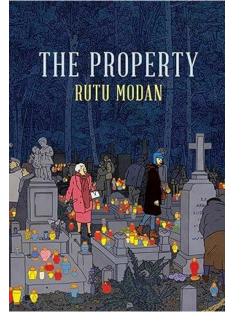

"Ambitious.... stunning.... Shot through with lyrical reflections and astute analysis, this is a rewarding portrait of a diverse and complex part of the world."

→Publishers Weekly (starred review)

"The enormous contradiction of a single, vast geopolitical region that evinces a stereotype-defeating multiplicity is captured brilliantly... The result is a celebration as well as an exercise in tough love." — Robert D. Kaplan, The Wall Street Journal

THE PROPERTY

The award-winning author of Exit Wounds returns with a story about secrets, money, and the bonds of love.

The Property is a work that will inspire, fascinate, and delight readers and critics alike. Savvy and insightful, elegant and subtle, Rutu Modan's second full-length graphic novel is a triumph of storytelling and fine lines.

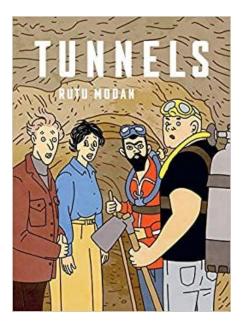

After the death of her son, Regina Segal takes her granddaughter Mica to Warsaw, hoping to reclaim a family property lost during the Second World War. As they get to know modern Warsaw, Regina is forced to recall difficult things about her past, and Mica begins to wonder if maybe their reasons for coming aren't a little different than what her grandmother led her to believe.

Modan offers up a world populated by prickly seniors, smart-alecky public servants, and stubborn women-a world whose realism is expressed alternately in the absurdity of people's behavior and in the complex consequences of their sacrifices. Modan's ever-present wit is articulated perfectly in her clear-line style, while a subtle, almost muted color palette complements the true-to-life nuances of her characterization. Exit Wounds made a huge splash for this signature combination of wit, style, and realism, and The Property will cement Modan's status as one of the foremost cartoonists working today.

INCLUDED ON MORE THAN TEN BEST OF THE YEAR LISTS, INCLUDING THE GUARDIAN, PUBLISHERS WEEKLY, SALON, AMAZON, AND THE WASHINGTON POST

"Modan delights in bringing the subtlest emotional shadings to vivid and often comical life on the page...[The Property is a] wryly funny and ultimately wrenching graphic novel." — NPR

"My comic book of the year, by a mile, is Rutu Modan's The Property... in which Mica Segal, a young Israeli woman, travels to Warsaw with her irascible grandmother to help her reclaim the apartment building she and her family were forced to give up in 1940...This, believe me, has everything you could possibly want in a comic: great pictures, a multilayered story, mystery, sharp wit." —The Guardian's Graphic Books of the Year

TUNNELS

Two-time Eisner Award winner Rutu Modan's third graphic novel, TUNNELS, is her deepest and wildest yet. Potent and funny, Modan reveals the Middle East as no westerner could.

When a great antiquities collector is forced to donate his entire collection to the Hebrew University in Jerusalem, his daughter Nili Broshi sees her last chance to finish an archaeological expedition begun decades earlier—a dig that could possibly yield the most important religious artifact in the Middle East. Motivated by the desire to reinstate her father's legacy as a great archaeologist after he was marginalized by his rival, Nili enlists a ragtag crew—a religious nationalist and his band of hilltop youths, her traitorous brother, and her childhood Palestinian friend, now an archaeological smuggler. As Nili's father slips deeper into dementia, warring factions close in on and fight over the Ark of the Covenant!

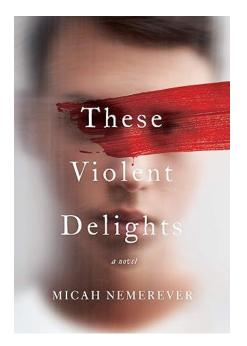

Backed by extensive research into this real-world treasure hunt, Rutu Modan sets her affecting novel at the center of a political crisis. She posits that the history of biblical Israel lies in one of the most disputed regions in the world, occupied by Israel and contested by Palestine. Often in direct competition, Palestinians and Israelis dig alongside one another, hoping to find the sacred artifact believed to be a conduit to God.

* TUNNELS was originally published in Hebrew by Keter Books, and was translated into English by Ishai Mishory.

Named a best graphic novel of the year by The New York Times, The Guardian, Variety, and Forbes

"Affecting... brightly colored and perfectly paced, [Modan's three graphic novels] have established her as her country's most renowned comics artist." —Gal Beckerman, The New York Times

"Complex and thrilling... If Modan has given us a tightly plotted adventure story, she has also delivered a brilliantly daring satire. ... I expect Tunnels to win all the prizes, and to be read and reread for decades to come." —Rachel Cooke, The Guardian

THESE VIOLENT DELIGHTS

A Literary Hub Best Book of Year • A Crime Reads Best Debut of the Year • A Newsweek 25 Best Fall Books • A Philadelphia Inquirer 10 Big Books for the Fall • An O Magazine.com LGBTQ Books That Are Changing the Literary Landscape • An Electric Lit Most Anticipated Debut • A Paperback Paris Best New LGBTQ+ Books To Read This Year Selection • A Passport Best Book of the Month

The Secret History meets Lie with Me in Micah Nemerever's compulsively readable debut novel—a feverishly taut Hitchcockian story about two college students, each with his own troubled past, whose escalating obsession with one another leads to an act of unspeakable violence.

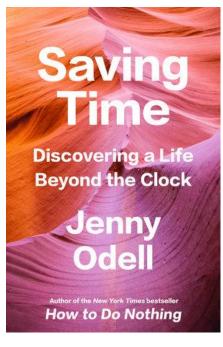

When Paul enters university in early 1970s Pittsburgh, it's with the hope of moving past the recent death of his father. Sensitive, insecure, and incomprehensible to his grieving family, Paul feels isolated and alone. When he meets the worldly Julian in his freshman ethics class, Paul is immediately drawn to his classmate's effortless charm. Paul sees Julian as his sole intellectual equal—an ally against the conventional world he finds so suffocating. Paul will stop at nothing to prove himself worthy of their friendship, because with Julian life is more invigorating than Paul could ever have imagined. But as charismatic as he can choose to be, Julian is also volatile and capriciously cruel, and Paul becomes increasingly afraid that he can never live up to what Julian expects of him.

As their friendship spirals into all-consuming intimacy, they each learn the lengths to which the other will go in order to stay together, their obsession ultimately hurtling them toward an act of irrevocable violence. Unfolding with a propulsive ferocity, These Violent Delights is an exquisitely plotted excavation of the depths of human desire and the darkness it can bring forth in us.

- Robin Wasserman, author of Girls on Fire and Mother Daughter Widow Wife

"Nemerever does a crafty job of slowly ratcheting up the tension.... A clever novel of manners." — New York Times

[&]quot;As unsettling as it is enthralling, These Violent Delights will engulf you: first in the intoxication of obsession, then in its toxic consequences. Micah Nemerever's debut is a beautiful portrait of intimacy, desperation, and the damage that damaged hearts can cause. It shattered me."

SAVING TIME: Discovering A Life Beyond the Clock

US RIGHTS SOLD IN A 12 BIDDER (17 IMPRINT) AUCTION  UK RIGHTS SOLD IN AN 11 BIDDER AUCTION  A New York Times Bestseller **

A radical argument that we are living on the wrong clock-one that tells us time is money—and that there are other ways of experiencing time that offer bold, hopeful possibilities for ourselves and the planet from the New York Times bestselling author of How to Do Nothing.

Our daily experience, dominated by the corporate clock that so many of us contort ourselves to fit inside, is destroying us. It wasn't built for people, it was built for profit. This is a book that tears open the seams of reality as we know it—the way we experience time itself—and rearranges it, reimagining a world not centered around work, the office clock, or the profit motive. Explaining how we got to the point where time became money, Odell offers us new models to live by–inspired by pre-industrial cultures, ecological, and geological time–that make a more humane, more hopeful way of living seem possible.

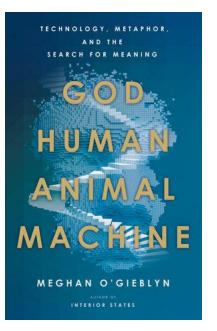

In this dazzling, subversive, and deeply hopeful reframing of time, Jenny Odell takes us on a journey through other temporal habitats. As planet-bound animals, we live inside shortening and lengthening days, alongside gardens growing, birds migrating, and cliffs eroding. The stretchy quality of waiting and desire, the way the present may suddenly feel marbled with childhood memory, the slow but sure procession of a pregnancy, or the time it takes to heal from injuries–physical or emotional. Odell urges us to become stewards of these different rhythms of life, to imagine a life, identity, and source of meaning outside of the world of work and profit, and to understand that the trajectory of our lives–or the life of the planet–is not a foregone conclusion. In that sense, "saving" time—recovering its fundamentally irreducible and inventive nature—could also mean that time saves us.

"Saving Time is an exposé of our past, an antidote to our present, and a manifesto for the future. ... It is one of the most important books I've read in my life."

- Ed Yong, author of An Immense World

GOD, HUMAN, ANIMAL, MACHINE

Finalist for the LA TIMES Book Award

From the author of the critically acclaimed Interior States, a strikingly original exploration of what it might mean to be authentically human in the age of artificial intelligence.

For most of human history the world was a magical and enchanted place ruled by forces beyond our understanding. The rise of science and Descartes's division of mind from world made materialism our ruling paradigm, in the process asking whether our own consciousness—i.e., souls—might be illusions. Now the inexorable rise of technology, with artificial intelligences that surpass our comprehension and control, and the spread of digital metaphors for self-understanding, the core questions of existence—identity, knowledge, the very nature and purpose of life itself—urgently require rethinking.

Meghan O'Gieblyn tackles this challenge with philosophical rigor, intellectual reach, essayistic verve, refreshing originality, and an ironic sense of contradiction. She draws deeply and sometimes humorously from her own personal experience as a formerly religious believer still haunted by questions of faith, and she serves as the best possible guide to navigating the territory we are all entering.

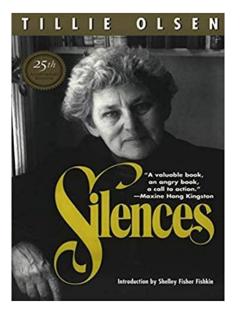

"GOD, HUMAN, ANIMAL, MACHINE is a hybrid beast, a remarkably erudite work of history, criticism and philosophy, but it is also, crucially, a memoir." —Becca Rothfeld, The New York Times

"A captivating portrait of how digital technology has fundamentally transformed both intellectual and religious thinking." —Los Angeles Review of Books

"Illuminating ... [A] very personal account of a painful philosophical evolution. A compelling reminder that the deepest philosophical queries guide and shape life." — \star Booklist (starred review)

"[A] truly fantastic book."-Ezra Klein

"One of the strongest essayists to emerge recently on the scene has written a strong and subtle rumination of what it means to be human. At times personal, at times philosophical, with a bracing mixture of openness and skepticism, it speaks thoughtfully and articulately to the most crucial issues awaiting our future." — Phillip Lopate

SILENCES

"What Tillie Olsen has to say . . . is of primary importance to those who want to understand how art is generated or subverted and to those trying to create it themselves." –Margaret Atwood, New York Times Book Review

"Language is power, and Olsen does a masterful and compassionate job here of showing who has been denied language in America, and why, and by whom." –George Saunders, Vulture

First published in 1978, SILENCES single-handedly revolutionized the literary canon. In this classic work, Olsen broke open the study of literature and discovered a lost continent—the writing of women and working-class people. From the excavated testimony of authors' letters and diaries we learn the many ways the creative spirit, especially in those disadvantaged by gender, class and race, can be silenced. Olsen recounts the torments of Melville, the crushing weight of criticism on Thomas Hardy, the shame that brought Willa Cather to a dead halt, and struggles of Virginia Woolf, Olsen's heroine and greatest exemplar of a writer who confronted the forces that would silence her. The reissued twenty-fifth-anniversary edition includes Olsen's now infamous reading lists of forgotten authors and a new introduction and author preface.

"A valuable book, an angry book, a call to action." — Maxine Hong Kingston

"Silences helped me to keep my sanity many a day." -Gloria Naylor, author of Mama Day

"[Silences is] 'the Bible.' I constantly return to it." -Sandra Cisneros, author of The House on Mango Street

"Silences will, like A Room of One's Own, be quoted where there is talk of the circumstances in which literature is possible." —Adrienne Rich, author of Diving into the Wreck

TELL ME A RIDDLE, REQUA I, & OTHER WORKS

"The four pieces in TELL ME A RIDDLE are lyrical bulletins of working-class family life, charged with emotional detail and delivered with an attention to the rhythms of consciousness more rigorous and powerful than most of what is called realism." –A.O. Scott, New York Times

A century after her birth, Tillie Olsen's writing is as relevant as when it first appeared; indeed, the clarity and passion of her vision and style have, if anything, become even more striking over time. Collected here for the first time are several of Olsen's nonfiction pieces about the 1930s, early journalism pieces, and short fiction, including the four beautifully crafted, highly celebrated stories originally published as her short story collection entitled TELL ME A RIDDLE: "I Stand Here Ironing," "Hey Sailor, What Ship?," "O Yes," and "Tell Me a Riddle." Also included, for the first time since it appeared in the 1971 Best American Short Stories, is "Requa I."

In these stories, as in all of her work, Olsen set a new standard for the treatment of women and the poor and for the depiction of their lives and circumstances. In her hands, the hard truths about motherhood and marriage, domestic life, labor, and political conviction found expression in language of such poetic intensity and depth that their influence continues to be felt today.

An introduction by Olsen's granddaughter, the poet Rebekah Edwards, and a foreword by her daughter Laurie Olsen provide a personal and generational context for the author's work.

"[Tillie] had invented a literary tradition of her own. . . . Every line is measured, compressed, resonant, stripped bare, so that paragraph after paragraph achieves the shocking brevity and power of the best poems. . . . By now I have read TELL ME A RIDDLE so often that it is essentially memorized." —Scott Turow, on NPR's You Must Read This

"As a great work of literary art [TELL ME A RIDDLE] will be read as long as the American language lasts." – Julian Moynihan

"Everything [Olsen] has written has become almost immediately a classic." -Robert Coles

"[TELL ME A RIDDLE is] enough to make [Olsen's] name a truly important one in writing. . . . She can spend no word that is not the right one." —Dorothy Parker

THE DETECTIVE MARGARET NOLAN SERIES

DEEP INTO THE DARK, #1

Set in an LA where real people live and work—not the superficial LA of Beverly Hills or the gritty underbelly of the city—Deep into the Dark features two really engaging, dynamic main characters and explores the nature of obsession, revenge, and grief.

DESOLATION CANYON, #2

LAPD Detective Margaret Nolan is struggling to move forward after the death of her brother in Afghanistan and taking a life in the line of duty. As a series of shocking revelations emerge, Nolan finds herself confronting a sinister cabal that just might destroy her and everyone she loves.

THE DEVIL YOU KNOW, #3

The body of beloved actor Evan Hobbes is found in the rubble of a Malibu rockslide a day after a fake video ruins his career. When Hobbes's agent's powerful brother-in-law is murdered, he and Nolan both find themselves entangled in a scandalous deception of deadly proportion that shakes the very foundation of Hollywood's untouchables.

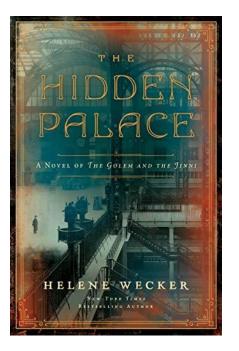

"[A] terrific series. . . Tracy's creating a literary landscape similar to Margaret Millar and Robert Crais." —Star Tribune

"Great atmosphere, vivid characters, and an intricate fair play plot that surprises as it twists its way to a satisfying resolution make this a winner."—Publishers Weekly

"Who needs movies anyway when you have books as laden with dirty secrets as this one?" —Kirkus Reviews

"A fine series. . . Margaret Nolan is a strong, intelligent, and aggressive investigator, a cop who won't stop until she finds the truth. . . [Tracy] is an efficient storyteller. There is no excess weight here; every scene has a purpose, and there's no conversational time-wasting. Here's hoping there are many more Margaret Nolan mysteries to come." — Booklist

THE HIDDEN PALACE

The long-awaited sequel to the New York Times bestseller THE GOLEM AND THE JINNI

Chava is a golem, a woman made of clay, able to hear the thoughts and longings of the humans around her, and compelled to help them. Ahmad is a jinni, a being of fire now imprisoned in the shape of a man, perpetually restless and free-spirited. Having met as two unlikely immigrants in 1899 Manhattan, their lives have become deeply intertwined, but they must decide what, exactly, they mean to each other—all while living disguised as humans, constantly fearing they'll be exposed as monsters.

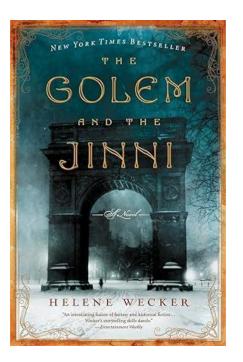

Meanwhile, Park Avenue heiress Sophia Winston, whose brief encounter with Ahmad has left her with a strange illness that makes her shiver with cold, travels to the Middle East to seek a cure. There she meets a tempestuous female jinni who's been banished from her tribe for her own untreatable condition. And in a tenement on the Lower East Side, a little girl named Kreindel helps her rabbi father build a golem that she names Yossele. When she is sent to an uptown orphanage, the hulking golem will become her only friend and companion.

Spanning the tumultuous years from the turn of the 20th century to the beginning of World War I, The Hidden Palace follows these lives and others as they collide and interweave. Can Chava and Ahmad find their places in the human world while remaining true to each other? Or will their own natures and desires conspire to tear them apart—especially once they encounter, thrillingly, other creatures of their own kinds?

"A blend of romance, Mary Shelley-esque horror, and folklore.... Wecker skillfully combines the storylines of Chava the Golem and Ahmad the Jinni and numerous other players, good and evil, in an enchanting tale that pleases on every page." — $\star Kirkus Reviews$ (Starred Review)

"Impressive...storytelling à la Dickens...A satisfying, mature sequel to The Golem and the Jinni, continuing the magical story of two immigrant mythological characters from the turn of the 20th century to the outbreak of WWI." —Publishers Weekly

"Fans of THE GOLEM AND THE JINNI have waited eight years for this sequel, a minor eternity perfectly in keeping with the precarious immortality of Wecker's hopeful monsters. It has been worth the wait." — \star BookPage Magazine (Starred Review)

THE GOLEM AND THE JINNI

A marvelous and absorbing debut novel about a chance meeting between two supernatural creatures in turn-of-the-century immigrant New York.

Chava is a golem, a creature made of clay by a disgraced rabbi knowledgeable in the ways of dark Kabbalistic magic. She serves as the wife to a Polish merchant who dies at sea on the voyage to America. As the ship arrives in New York in 1899, Chava is unmoored and adrift until a rabbi on the Lower East Side recognizes her for the creature she is and takes her in.

Ahmad is a jinni, a being of fire born in the ancient Syrian desert and trapped centuries ago in an old copper flask by a Bedouin wizard. Released by a Syrian tinsmith in a Manhattan shop, Ahmad appears in human form but is still not free. An iron band around his wrist binds him to the wizard and to the physical world.

Chava and Ahmad meet accidentally and become friends and soul mates despite their opposing natures. But when the golem's violent nature overtakes her one evening, their bond is challenged. An even more powerful threat will emerge, however, and bring Chava and Ahmad together again, challenging their very existence and forcing them to make a fateful choice.

Compulsively readable, The Golem and the Jinni weaves strands of Yiddish and Middle Eastern literature, historical fiction and magical fable, in a wondrously inventive tale that is mesmerizing and unforgettable.

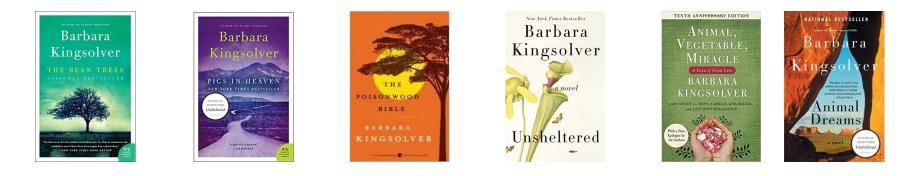

"An intoxicating fusion of fantasy and historical fiction...Wecker's storytelling skills dazzle."

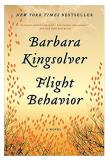

-Entertainment Weekly

"With a delightful blend of the prosaic and the fanciful, The Golem and the Jinni explores what it means to be human...to live and find love while overcoming the powerful adversary who threatens to destroy them." — Deborah Harkness, author of A Discovery of Witches

"Original and fresh...A fascinating blend of historical fiction and Jewish and Arab folklore." — Library Journal

THE BEAN TREES (1988) Greer Family #1

A bestseller that has come to be regarded as an American classic, The Bean Trees is the novel that launched Barbara Kingsolver's remarkable literary career.

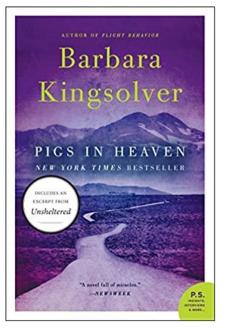

THE BEAN TREES is the charming, engrossing tale of rural Kentucky native Taylor Greer, who only wants to get away from her roots and avoid getting pregnant. But when Taylor heads west with high hopes and a barely functional car, she meets the human condition head-on. By the time she arrives in Tucson, she has acquired a three-year-old Native American girl named Turtle and must somehow come to terms with both motherhood and the necessity for putting down roots. THE BEAN TREES is a story about love and friendship, abandonment and belonging, and the discovery of surprising resources in seemingly empty places.

THE BEAN TREES is a book readers have taken to their hearts. It is now a standard in college literature classes across the nation and has been translated for a readership stretching from Japan to Romania.

"The Bean Trees is the work of a visionary." -Los Angeles Times

"This is the story of a lovable, resourceful 'instant mother, ' one who speaks, acts and learns for herself, becoming an inspiration for us all." —Glamour

"This funny, inspiring book is a marvelous affirmation of risk-taking, commitment and everyday miracles...An overwhelming delight, as random and unexpected as real life." —Publishers Weekly

PIGS IN HEAVEN (1993) Greer Family #2

Picking up where her modern classic THE BEAN TREES left off, Barbara Kingsolver's bestselling PIGS IN HEAVEN continues the tale of Turtle and Taylor Greer, a Native American girl and her adoptive mother who have settled in Tucson, Arizona, as they both try to overcome their difficult pasts.

Taking place three years after THE BEAN TREES, Taylor is now dating a musician named Jax and has officially adopted Turtle. But when a lawyer for the Cherokee Nation begins to investigate the adoption—their new life together begins to crumble.

Depicting the clash between fierce family love and tribal law, poverty and means, abandonment and belonging, PIGS IN HEAVEN is a morally wrenching, gently humorous work of fiction that speaks equally to the head and the heart.

ANIMAL DREAMS (1990)

"An emotional masterpiece . . . A novel in which humor, passion, and superb prose conspire to seize a reader by the heart and by the soul." —New York Daily News

From Barbara Kingsolver, the acclaimed author of Flight Behavior, The Lacuna, The Bean Trees, and other modern classics, Animal Dreams is a passionate and complex novel about love, forgiveness, and one woman's struggle to find her place in the world

"Animals dream about the things they do in the daytime just like people do. If you want sweet dreams, you've got to live a sweet life." So says Loyd Peregrina, a handsome Apache trainman and latter-day philosopher. But when Codi Noline returns to her hometown, Loyd's advice is painfully out of her reach. Dreamless and at the end of her rope, Codi comes back to Grace, Arizona, to confront her past and face her ailing, distant father. What she finds is a town threatened by a silent environmental catastrophe, some startling clues to her own identity, and a man whose view of the world could change the course of her life.

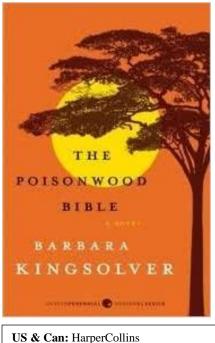

Blending flashbacks, dreams, and Native American legends, ANIMAL DREAMS is a suspenseful love story and a moving exploration of life's largest commitments.

"Kingsolver probes the human heart with uncommon wisdom. Animal Dreams is a gracefully written, large-spirited novel. Anchored on the earth, it dares to soar into the ethereal." —New York Newsday

"Rich, complex, witty . . . This is a sweet book, full of bitter pain; a beautiful weaving of the light and the dark. This one will be with us for a long time." —Washington Post Book World

"Animal Dreams is a novel that feels closer to the truth about modern lives than anything I've read in a long time . . . An astonishing book that ought to put Barbara Kingsolver in the first ranks of fiction writers." —Cosmopolitan

"Animal Dreams literally bursts with life. Its description of how one woman finds her way back from the edge of despair seems absolutely perfect . . . [It] leaves the reader filled with wonder and hope." — Houston Post

THE POISONWOOD BIBLE (1998)

Over 70 weeks on the New York Times bestseller list

"A powerful ... epic ... [Kingsolver] has with infinitely steady hands worked the prickly threads of religion, politics, race, sin and redemption into a thing of terrible beauty." —Los Angeles Times Book Review

Widely acknowledged as one of the most important novels in American literature, THE POISONWOOD BIBLE is a suspenseful epic of tragic undoing and remarkable reconstruction in the interlocked fates of one family and a newly independent African nation

THE POISONWOOD BIBLE is a story told by the wife and four daughters of Nathan Price, a fierce, evangelical Baptist who takes his family and mission to the Belgian Congo in 1959. They carry with them everything they believe they will need from home, but soon find that all of it—from garden seeds to Scripture—is worse than useless on African soil. What follows is a suspenseful epic of one family's tragic undoing and remarkable reconstruction over the course of three decades in postcolonial Africa.

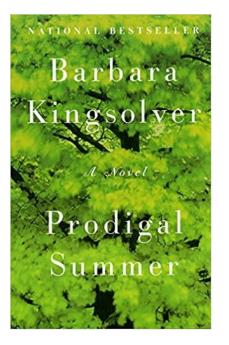

The novel is set against one of the most dramatic political chronicles of the twentieth century: the Congo's fight for independence from Belgium, the murder of its first elected prime minister, the CIA coup to install his replacement, and the insidious progress of a world economic order that robs the fledgling African nation of its autonomy. Taking its place alongside the classic works of postcolonial literature, this ambitious novel establishes Kingsolver as one of the most thoughtful and daring of modern writers.

PRODIGAL SUMMER (2000)

PRODIGAL SUMMER weaves together three stories of human love within a larger tapestry of lives in southern Appalachia. At the heart of these intertwined narratives is a den of coyotes that have recently migrated into the region. Deanna Wolfe, a reclusive wildlife biologist, watches them from an isolated mountain cabin where she is caught off-guard by Eddie Bondo, a young hunter who comes to invade her most private spaces and her solitary life.

Down the mountain, another web of lives unfolds as Lusa Maluf Landowski, a bookish city girl turned farmer's wife, finds herself in a strange place where she must declare or lose her attachment to the land that has become her own. And a few more miles down the road, a pair of elderly, feuding neighbors tend their respective farms and wrangle about God, pesticides, and the possibilities the future holds.

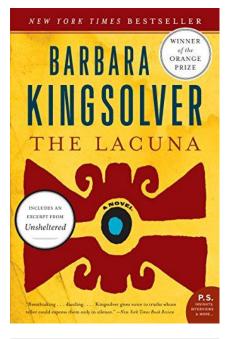

Over the course of one long summer, these characters find connections to one another, and to the land, and the final, urgent truth that humans are only one piece of life on earth.

THE LACUNA (2009)

Over 40 weeks on the New York Times bestseller list

THE LACUNA tells the story of Harrison William Shepherd, a man caught between two worlds an unforgettable protagonist whose search for identity will take readers to the heart of the twentieth century's most tumultuous events.

Born in America and raised in Mexico, Harrison Shepherd is a liability to his social-climbing flapper mother, Salome. When he starts work in the household of Mexican artists Diego Rivera and Frida Kahlo - where the Bolshevik leader, Lev Trotsky, is also being harbored as a political exile - he inadvertently casts his lot with art, communism and revolution. A compulsive diarist, he records and relates his colorful experiences of life in the midst of the Mexican revolution. A violent upheaval sends him back to America; but political winds continue to throw him between north and south, in a plot that turns many times on the unspeakable breach - the lacuna - between truth and public presumption.

Set in the present day in the rural community of Feathertown, Tennessee, Flight Behavior tells the story of Dellarobia Turnbow, a petite, razor-sharp 29-year-old who nurtured worldly ambitions before becoming pregnant and marrying at seventeen. Now, after more than a decade of tending to small children on a failing farm, oppressed by poverty, isolation and her husband's antagonistic family, she has mitigated her boredom by surrendering to an obsessive flirtation with a handsome younger man.

In the opening scene, Dellarobia is headed for a secluded mountain cabin to meet this man and initiate what she expects will be a self-destructive affair. But the tryst never happens. Instead, she hikes up a mountain road behind her house toward her secret rendezvous, but instead encounters a shocking sight: a silent, forested valley filled with what looks like a lake of fire. She can only understand it as a cautionary miracle, but it sparks a raft of other explanations from scientists, religious leaders, and the media. The bewildering emergency draws rural farmers into unexpected acquaintance with urbane journalists, opportunists, sightseers, and a striking biologist with his own stake in the outcome.

As the community lines up to judge the woman and her miracle, Dellarobia confronts her family, her church, her town, and a larger world, in a flight toward truth that could undo all she has ever believed.

"One of the gifts of a Kingsolver novel is the resplendence of her prose. She takes palpable pleasure in the craft of writing, creating images that stay with the reader long after her story is done...(a) majestic and brave new novel." —New York Times Book Review

UNSHELTERED (2018)

#2 New York Times bestseller **

How could two hardworking people do everything right in life, a woman asks, and end up destitute? Willa Knox and her husband followed all the rules as responsible parents and professionals, and have nothing to show for it but debts and an inherited brick house that is falling apart. The magazine where Willa worked has folded; the college where her husband had tenure has closed. Their dubious shelter is also the only option for a disabled father-in-law and an exasperating, free-spirited daughter. When the family's one success story, an Ivy-educated son, is uprooted by tragedy, he seems likely to join them, with dark complications of his own.

In an earlier era, in the same house, a troubled husband and public servant asks, How can a man tell the truth, and be reviled for it? A science teacher with a passion for honest investigation, Thatcher Greenwood finds himself under siege: his employer forbids him to speak of the exciting work just published by Charles Darwin. His young bride and social-climbing mother-in-law bristle at the risk of scandal, and dismiss his worries that their elegant house is unsound. In a village ostensibly founded as a benevolent Utopia, Thatcher wants only to honor his duties, but his friendships with a woman scientist and a renegade newspaper editor threaten to draw him into a vendetta with the town's powerful men.

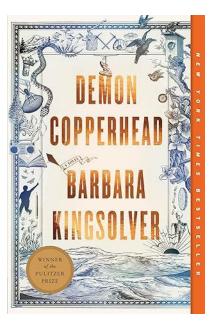

UNSHELTERED is the compulsively readable story of two families, in two centuries, who live at the corner of Sixth and Plum in Vineland, New Jersey, navigating what seems to be the end of the world as they know it. With history as their tantalizing canvas, these characters paint a startlingly relevant portrait of life in precarious times, when the foundations of the past have failed to prepare us for the future.

DEMON COPPERHEAD (2022)

RECIPIENT OF THE 2023 PULITZER PRIZE FOR FICTION WINNER OF THE 2023 WOMEN'S PRIZE FOR FICTION NYT TOP TEN BOOK OF THE YEAR AN OPRAH'S BOOKCLUB SELECTION 70 WEEKS ON THE NYT FICTION BESTSELLER LIST AND COUNTING

From the New York Times bestselling author of Unsheltered and Flight Behavior, a brilliant novel which enthralls, compels, and captures the heart as it evokes a young hero's unforgettable journey to maturity.

Demon Copperhead is set in the mountains of southern Appalachia. It's the story of a boy born to a teenaged single mother in a single-wide trailer, with no assets beyond his dead father's good looks and copper-colored hair, a caustic wit, and a fierce talent for survival. In a plot that never pauses for breath, relayed in his own unsparing voice, he braves the modern perils of foster care, child labor, derelict schools, athletic success, addiction, disastrous loves, and crushing losses. Through all of it, he reckons with his own invisibility in a popular culture where even the superheroes have abandoned rural people in favor of cities.

Many generations ago, Charles Dickens wrote David Copperfield from his experience as a survivor of institutional poverty and its damages to children in his society. Those problems have yet to be solved in ours. Dickens is not a prerequisite for readers of this novel, but he provided its inspiration. In transposing a Victorian epic novel to the contemporary American South, Barbara Kingsolver enlists Dickens' anger and compassion, and above all, his faith in the transformative powers of a good story. Demon Copperhead speaks for a new generation of lost boys, and all those born into beautiful, cursed places they can't imagine leaving behind.

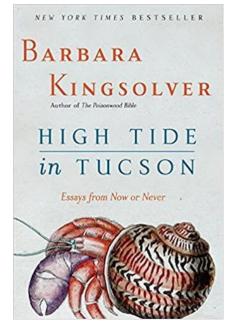

"May be the best novel of 2022.... Equal parts hilarious and heartbreaking, this is the story of an irrepressible boy nobody wants, but readers will love." –Ron Charles, Washington Post

"An Appalachian David Copperfield. . . . Kingsolver's novel sweeps you along just as powerfully as the original does." — New York Times

"A serpentine, hard-striking tale of profound dimension and resonance."— Booklist

HIGH TIDE IN TUCSON: Essays From Now or Never (1995)

Over 20 weeks on the New York Times Bestseller List

In these twenty-five essays, Kingsolver returns to her familiar themes of family, community, and the natural world. With the eyes of a scientist and the vision of a poet, Kingsolver writes about notions as diverse as modern motherhood, the history of private property, and the suspended citizenship of humans in the animal kingdom. Her canny pursuit of meaning from an inscrutable world compels us to find instructions for life in surprising places: a museum of atomic bomb relics, a West African voodoo love charm, a family of paper dolls, the ethics of a wild pig who persistently invades a garden, a battle of wills with a two-year-old, or a troop of oysters who observe high tide in the middle of Illinois.

In sharing her thoughts about the urgent business of being alive, Kingsolver the essayist employs the same keen eyes, persuasive tongue, and understanding heart that characterize her acclaimed fiction. Defiant, funny, courageously honest, HIGH TIDE IN TUCSON proves once again that "there is no one quite like Barbara Kingsolver in contemporary literature."--Washington Post Book World

"Kingsolver's essays should be savored like quiet afternoons with a friend.... [She] speaks in a language rich with music and replete with good sense." —New York Times Book Review

"A delightful, challenging, and wonderfully informative book." —San Francisco Chronicle

"The acclaimed novelist's extraordinary powers of observations and understanding of character serve her beautifully in this collection of essays." —Entertainment Weekly

"Ms. Kingsolver possesses the rare ability to see the natural world with the keenness of both the poet and the naturalist." —Washington Times

"Clever...magical...beautifully crafted. Kingsolver spins you around the philosophic world a dozen times" —Milwaukee Sentinel

SMALL WONDER: Essays (2002)

In twenty-two wonderfully articulate essays, Barbara Kingsolver raises her voice in praise of nature, family, literature, and the joys of everyday life while examining the genesis of war, violence, and poverty in our world

SMALL WONDER begins with a parable gleaned from recent news: villagers search for a missing infant boy and find him, unharmed, in the cave of a dangerous bear that has mothered him like one of her own. Clearly, our understanding of evil needs to be revised. What we fear most can save us. From this tale, Barbara Kingsolver goes on to consider a world of surprising and hopeful prospects, ranging from an inventive conservation scheme in a remote jungle to the backyard flock of chickens tended by the author's small daughter.

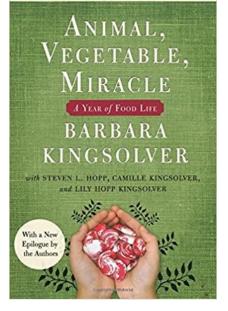

These essays are grounded in the author's belief that our largest problems have grown from the earth's remotest corners as well as our own backyards, and that answers may lie in those places, too. In the voice Kingsolver's readers have come to rely on, sometimes grave, occasionally hilarious, and ultimately persuasive, Small Wonder is a hopeful examination of the people we seem to be, and what we might yet make of ourselves.

"Soulful and soul searching....A passionate invitation to readers to be part of the crowd that cares about the environment, peace, and family....A tantalizing peek into Kingsolver's world." — San Francisco Chronicle Book Review

"This book of essays by Barbara Kingsolver is like a visit from a cherished old friend." — Publishers Weekly

"Trained as a biologist and gifted in the art of storytelling, Kingsolver is able to draw on her knowledge of the wild--of evolution and biodiversity--as well as her feel for archetypes to bring into focus and dramatize the biological and social impact of our unexamined habits of consumption." —Booklist

ANIMAL, VEGETABLE, MIRACLE (2007; rev. ed. 2017)

26 weeks on the New York Times bestseller list

Since its publication in 2007, ANIMAL, VEGETABLE, MIRACLE has captivated readers with its blend of memoir and journalistic investigation. Newly updated with original pieces from the entire Kingsolver clan, this commemorative volume explores how the family's original project has been carried forward through the years.

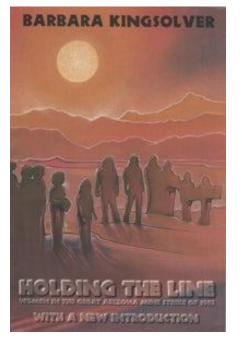

When Barbara Kingsolver and her family moved from suburban Arizona to rural Appalachia, they took on a new challenge: to spend a year eating nothing but food they can grow, or find locally, paying close attention to the provenance of all they consume. Concerned about the environmental, social, and physical costs of American food culture, they hoped to recover what Barbara considers our nation's lost appreciation for farms and the natural processes of food production. Since 2007, their scheme has evolved enormously. In the updated edition, featuring an afterword composed by the entire Kingsolver family, Barbara's husband, Steven, discusses how the project grew into a farm-to-table restaurant and community development project training young farmers in their area to move into sustainable food production. Camille, Barbara's older daughter, writes about her decision to move back to a rural area after college, and how she and her husband incorporate their food values in their lives as they begin their new family. Lily, Barbara's younger daughter, writes about how growing up on a farm, in touch with natural processes and food chains, has shaped her life as a future environmental scientist. And Barbara writes about their sheep, and how they grew into her second vocation as a fiber artist, and reports on the enormous response they've received from other home-growers and local-food devotees.

"A hybrid book...part memoir...part call to action, part education, part recipe collection...ANIMAL, VEGETABLE, MIRACLE makes an important contribution to the chorus of voices calling for change."

-Chicago Tribune

"Cogent and illuminating... Without sentimentality, this book captures the pulse of the farm and the deep gratification it provides, as well as the intrinsic humor of the situation." —Janet Maslin, New York Times

"It's a lovely book. One wants with all one's heart to sit with [Kingsolver] on the porch at the end of the day and shell peas." —Los Angeles Times

HOLDING THE LINE (1996)

Holding the Line, Barbara Kingsolver's first non-fiction book, is the story of women's lives transformed by an a signal event. Set in the small mining towns of Arizona, it is part oral history and part social criticism, exploring the process of empowerment which occurs when people work together as a community. Like Kingsolver's award-winning novels, Holding the Line is a beautifully written book grounded on the strength of its characters.

Hundreds of families held the line in the 1983 strike against Phelps Dodge Copper in Arizona. After more than a year the strikers lost their union certification, but the battle permanently altered the social order in these small, predominantly Hispanic mining towns. At the time the strike began, many women said they couldn't leave the house without their husband's permission. Yet, when injunctions barred union men from picketing, their wives and daughters turned out for the daily picket lines. When the strike dragged on and men left to seek jobs elsewhere, women continued to picket, organize support, and defend their rights even when the towns were occupied by the National Guard. "Nothing can ever be the same as it was before," said Diane McCormick of the Morenci Miners Women's Auxiliary. "Look at us. At the beginning of this strike, we were just a bunch of ladies."

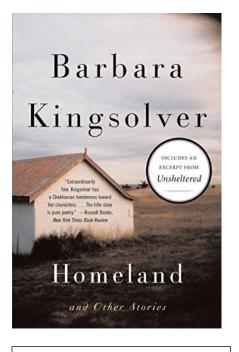

"Like Kingsolver's fiction, Holding the Line is a beautifully written book grounded on the strength of its characters—only this time the characters are real." — Journal of the Southwest

"The women tell remarkable stories of their lives and actions.... This book pays powerful tribute to their resolve and passion for economic justice." — Publishers Weekly

"Holding the Line is both clear and emotional, the story of women who try to get a fair shake in their workplace and realize they can stop at nothing short of control over their entire lives. This is a report from the trenches of where the political meets the personal." — John Sayles

HOMELAND AND OTHER STORIES (1989)

"Extraordinarily fine. Kingsolver has a Chekhovian tenderness toward her characters. . . . The title story is pure poetry." —Russell Banks, New York Times Book Review

With the same wit and sensitivity that have come to characterize her highly praised and beloved novels, acclaimed author Barbara Kingsolver gives us a rich and emotionally resonant collection of twelve stories. Spreading her memorable characters over landscapes ranging from Northern California to the hills of eastern Kentucky and the Caribbean island of St. Lucia, Kingsolver tells stories of hope, momentary joy, and powerful endurance. In every setting, Kingsolver's distinctive voice— at times comic, but often heartrending—rings true as she explores the twin themes of family ties and the life choices one must ultimately make alone.

HOMELAND AND OTHER STORIES creates a world of love and possibility that readers will want to take as their own.

"Read HOMELAND AND OTHER STORIES and you will feel glad to be alive. You are delighted by a gifted storyteller. You are strengthened and healed by the toughness and tenderness she discerns in humanity's daily rounds." —Newsday

"Kingsolver's humanity sounds the clearest note, telling us about characters in the middle of their days, who live as we really do, from one small incident of awareness to the next." —Los Angeles Times

"Kingsolver understands in an uncanny way the significance of the ordinary, the fleeting moment that may become lost or become catharsis. She writes with refreshing clarity, humor and honesty." —Detroit Free Press

"Kingsolver is an extraordinary storyteller." —Chicago Tribune

ANOTHER AMERICA (1998; rev. ed. 2022)

"From a bestselling and beloved author, an intensely personal collection of poetry "rich with political and human resonance" (Ursula K. LeGuin)

Before becoming the bestselling author we know today, Barbara Kingsolver, as a new college graduate in search of adventure, moved to the borderlands of Tucson, Arizona. What she found, she says, was "another America."

Interweaving past political events, from the US-backed dictatorships in South America to the government surveillance carried out in the Reagan years, Kingsolver's early poetry expands into a broader examination of the racism, discrimination, and immigration system she witnessed at close range. The poems coalesce in a record of her emerging adulthood, in which she confronts the hyporisy of the national myth of America—a confrontation that would come to shape her not only as an artist, but as a citizen. With a new introduction from Kingsolver that reflects on the current border crisis, Another America is a striking portrait of a country deeply divided between those with privilege and those without, and the lives of urgent purpose that may be carved out in between.

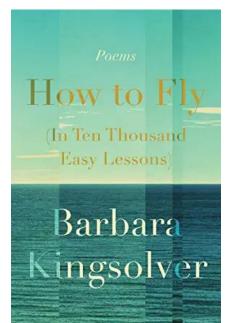

"Barbara Kingsolver belongs in the company of such poets as Clifton, Levertov, Hogan, Forché and Rich. Her pure American voice, chorded in both the great American languages, is rich with political and human resonance." —Ursula K. LeGuin

"Each poem is a true story; with some I was moved to tears." —Isabelle Allende

"These poems made me stop mid-book, telephone a friend and brave saying the unsayable – palabras del corazón that often go unsaid." —Sanda Cisneros

"The best of American political poetry, melding emotion and analysis, daily life and national issues, voice and heart." —Booklist

"This powerful collection of poetry deals with protest against political and social repression experienced by ordinary people, particularly women, under military regimes in Central and South America during the last 20 years. Through vivid imagery and compelling messages, Kingsolver makes a passionate appeal to end the suffering of victims of revolution, oppression, and war." —School Library Journal

HOW TO FLY (In Ten Thousand Easy Lessons) (2020)

In this intimate collection, the beloved author of The Poisonwood Bible and more than a dozen other New York Times bestsellers, winner or finalist for the Pulitzer and countless other prizes, now trains her eye on the everyday and the metaphysical in poems that are smartly crafted, emotionally rich, and luminous.

In her second poetry collection, Barbara Kingsolver offers reflections on the practical, the spiritual, and the wild. She begins with "how to" poems addressing everyday matters such as being hopeful, married, divorced; shearing a sheep; praying to unreliable gods; doing nothing at all; and of course, flying. A next section includes poems about making peace (or not) with the complicated bonds of friendship and family, and making peace (or not) with death, in the many ways it finds us. Some poems reflect on the redemptive powers of art and poetry itself; others consider where everything begins.

Closing the book are poems that celebrate natural wonders—birdsong and ghost-flowers, ruthless ants, clever shellfish, coral reefs, deadly deserts, and thousand-year-old beech trees—all speaking to the daring project of belonging to an untamed world beyond ourselves.

Altogether, these are poems about transcendence: finding breath and lightness in life and the everyday acts of living. It's all terribly easy and, as the title suggests, not entirely possible. Or at least, it is never quite finished.

"A gorgeous collection of poetry... These poems unplug from TV and social media and the outrage of the moment and turn our attention to the immediate and the everlasting, human intimacy and the power and mystery of nature." —Tampa Bay Times

"Kingsolver brings her gifts of observation and reflection to HOW TO FLY...For a reader wanting to escape, to fly while grounded, this book is a map that offers surprise and delight." — BookPage
