THE DECISION – Germany 1929 to 1934

- Bestselling author Bisky captures the decisive years that shaped Germany's future.
- A detailed and insightful portrayal of the decline of the Weimar Republic still regarded today as a model of political catastrophe – a topic of immense topicality.

October 2024 · 560 pages

Jens Bisky, born in Leipzig in 1966, studied cultural sciences and German language and literature in Berlin. He wrote for the Berliner Zeitung and has been a staff writer for Süddeutsche Zeitung's Feuilleton arts and culture section since 2001. He has also authored several well-received books, including Geboren am 13. August (2004), Unser König: Friedrich der Große und seine Zeit (2011), and Berlin. Biographie einer großen Stadt (2019). In 2017 he was awarded the Johann Heinrich Merck Prize by the German Academy for Language and Poetry for his literary criticism and essays.

In October 1929, the death of successful foreign minister Gustav Stresemann raised questions about the future of the republic. A fascist coalition was forming and took power in 1933. Farmers threw bombs, public finances faced growing deficits, and the parliamentary system seemed paralyzed. By summer 1930, the choice was between a democratic republic or a fascist state. What followed was the rise of radical forces, the disintegration of bourgeois circles, middle-class unrest, the arrogance of conservatives and nationalists who thought they could control Hitler, and fear of civil war. This led to the most criminal dictatorship of the 20th century.

Jens Bisky tells the story of how the Weimar Republic was destroyed in a whirlwind of hardship and anger, using the perspectives of the time's politicians, journalists, writers, lawyers, and officers. How did they view the situation, and what options did they have? This is a sweeping look at an extreme time that still affects the present.

"Jens Bisky keeps his readers in suspense with his great storytelling skills."

THE SOLD LAND – Farmers, Soils, and Capital

- Timely topic during farmer strikes and cost-of-living crisis.
- Explores the debate and future developments in national ecology, economy, and land use.

October 2024 · 128 pages

© Matthias Haslauer

Dirk Böttcher has been a freelance journalist for over 20 years. He writes primarily for the business magazine brand eins and co-founded ag text, a network of journalists exploring communication for companies and institutions. They create magazines, books, films, and more. Böttcher resides in Rostock.

We are losing the ground beneath our feet – what can we do?

We are losing the ground beneath our feet. The foundation of our existence and our economy is being sealed, over-fertilized, flooded, or dried out. The major crises of our time – housing shortages, farmer unrest, migration, war, and climate change – are all also soil crises. The Roman civil wars and the medieval peasant revolts began because of land, the first result of the French Revolution was land reform. Today, once again, tractors are rolling against state rulers. Yet soil, along with water, is also our most important resource; our soil possesses the highest biodiversity of all habitats on Earth. And yet we are destroying this important resource faster than we can understand it. Therefore, this book is timely and asks the right questions: Who owns this largest ecosystem? How do we want to use it in the future? How do we find a wise approach to this diverse resource? And how can a better understanding of soil shape our future?

TRAUMALAND – Tracing Germany's Past and Present

- A look at past traces in the present, exploring memory and responsibility, and advocating for humanity and solidarity.
- Betrachtungen einer Barbarin was nominated for the German Non-Fiction Prize 2021.

January 2025 · 208 pages

© Sarah Berger

Asal Dardan, born in 1978 in Tehran, grew up in Cologne, Bonn, and Aberdeen. She studied Cultural Studies in Hildesheim and Middle Eastern Studies in Lund, and now lives in Berlin. Her essays have won and have been nominated for several prizes, such as the German Non-Fiction Prize.

Unable to wipe away the blood or erase the fact that it was shed. Making the deed and the guilt visible, even if the perpetrators never lifted a hand and the victims remained invisible: "Blood is on your hands." This is how Asal Dardan justifies the necessity of remembering and the responsibility of future generations. In Traumaland, she creates a new topography of Germany, traces the past, and explores parallel and contrasting experiences in immigrant society. The painful past reaches into our present, with Nazi crimes echoing cruelly in today's racist violence and the traumatic experiences of minorities.

Who shapes German history? Who bears responsibility for past guilt? Which memories are told, and which remain unheard? Asal Dardan challenges entrenched memory discourses with her quest for connections, simultaneous experiences, and hope for a shared remembrance that accommodates different realities.

"Asal Dardan maps a fragile landscape that guides us toward new ways of remembering." Deniz Utlu

Fabio De Masi

MONEY, POWER, CRIME – Protecting Democracy from Financial Crime and Big Money

- Reveals systemic issues behind crises and scandals and examines the fight for internet and financial control.

January 2025 · 320 pages

© Olaf Krostitz

Fabio De Masi, born in 1980, is a German-Italian politician (BSW). He served in the European Parliament and the German Bundestag. He studied economics in Hamburg, obtained a master's degree in International Relations from the University of Cape Town, and another master's degree in International Economics from the Berlin School of Economics and Law. He gained national attention as the Left's representative on the Parliamentary Inquiry Committee on the Wirecard case.

Whether it is the financial crisis, the Wirecard scandal, or the Cum-Ex deals of Warburg Bank, politicians have paved the way for criminals in suits. How can this be? Few understand the reasons and background better than Fabio De Masi, known as the "financial detective". He was the first politician to warn about Wirecard when the government was still talking about a German stock market and internet miracle. He also tangled Chancellor Olaf Scholz in contradictions over his claimed memory lapses in the Warburg affair.

In this book, Fabio De Masi uncovers the systemic causes of financial crises, the forces behind recent financial scandals, and the battle for control of the financial and data highways on the internet. He also gives a behind-the-scenes look at parliament and his own motivations. Finally, he explains what needs to be done now to protect our democracy.

BUT IT HELPED MY AUNT – Spotting False Arguments and Pseudo-Experts

- An engaging and humorous approach to sharing knowledge and scientific expertise.

December 2024 · 256 pages

Maximilian Doeckel is a journalist who previously freelanced for various WDR programs, mainly focusing on science and entertainment formats. He's now a full-time editor in the Quarks editorial team. Alongside Jonathan Focke, he is one of two Science Cops.

Jonathan Focke studied science journalism with a focus on physics at TU Dortmund. He worked as an editor for Quarks & Co and the radio science team. Since 2016, he's been an editor in Quarks' digital team and is now in charge of the digital brand. He and Maximilian Doeckel are the Science Cops.

Facts over excuses, science over deceit, and education over exploitation!

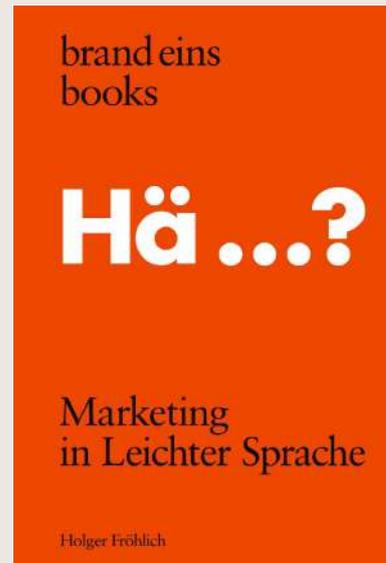

Germany often presents itself as a land of enlightenment and science, but appearances can be deceiving: ignorance, lack of knowledge, and rejection of science permeate all social classes, leading to misinformation and even societal division. This is where the Quarks Science Cops come in: science journalists Maximilian Doeckel and Jonathan Focke expose the dirty tricks and manipulative techniques used by miracle cure manufacturers, self-proclaimed "healers", and other profiteers who exploit people's gullibility for profit.

Their book helps us identify scientific falsehoods, distinguish pseudo-experts from real ones, and navigate life with greater awareness. After reading the book, we gain insight into where and how unscientific nonsense is propagated in Germany. Alongside informative content and specific tips, a touch of humor makes for an engaging read – because learning is easier when it's fun.

EH ...? – Marketing in Easy Language

- The first marketing lexicon written in easy language.
- The author's sequel to Kapitalismus in leichter Sprache, with rights sold to Taiwan (Business Weekly).

September 2024 · 128 pages

Holger Fröhlich is a journalist known for his award-winning work. Since 2010, he has been writing mostly for the business magazine brand eins. He translates complex texts into easy language in his monthly column, which has been featured in the magazine since 2016. With a background in general Rhetoric and Comparative Religious Studies, he is passionate about language and clarity. Fröhlich also delivers lectures and workshops on this topic.

Domainpop in Double Opt-In vs. Ambush Marketing

In marketing, even the simplest concepts are obscured by grandiose terms, and new acronyms and Anglicisms create confusion for both beginners and many professionals. This book puts an end to that. Using plain language, it demystifies marketing jargon. Author Holger Fröhlich translates the most important and absurd terms into clear, straightforward language that aids accessible communication. In an entertaining way, he makes complex topics understandable to everyone and also helps clarify deliberate linguistic deceptions.

This book makes the mechanisms and principles of marketing clear for all: advertisers, communication professionals, or students will appreciate it, as will their audience: consumers. The book's accessible approach ensures that the secret language of marketing becomes understandable for everyone.

THE BLUE LANTERN – Stories from the Road

- Extraordinary destinations and unique behind-the-scenes insights: Gastmann's vivid storytelling reveals surprising and moving moments for a one-of-a-kind experience.
- His travel reports were all Spiegel bestsellers!

August 2024 · 272 pages

Dennis Gastmann, born in 1978, traveled the world for years as a foreign correspondent. His highly praised book Mit 80.000 Fragen um die Welt was published in 2011, followed by his journey from Germany over the Alps to Italy to atone for his sins (Gang nach Canossa, 2012). For Atlas der unentdeckten Länder (2016), he visited the last unexplored locations on Earth, and he explored Japan for Der vorletzte Samurai (2018). His travel reports have all become Spiegel bestsellers. His latest work is Dalee, his first novel. Dennis Gastmann lives in Hamburg and works around the world.

The world is vast, round, and brilliantly blue – and Dennis Gastmann has experienced it all. Sometimes in glimpses, sometimes in full technicolor, and sometimes like a fever dream, from Andalusia to Allahabad, Sydney to Swakopmund, and the thousand lights of Manhattan to Madurai, the Tamil city of temples and sorcerers. In this book, the seasoned reporter shares his adventures around the world.

He travels with a gold prospector through the Australian desert, dances with Finland's most famous tango instructor, and philosophizes on Taiwan with a Chinese dissident about the price of freedom. In India, he kneels before the leader of the Hijra, the third gender, and in California, he rolls through a "drive-in funeral". In southern Spain, he accompanies the hooded debt collectors of the "Monastery of Cashiers" on their not-so-religious mission.

Gastmann visits a "patriotic lesson" at Putin's former elementary school, where children learn to handle Kalashnikovs, and finds himself in the grips of the Russian secret service. Vivid, touching, and sometimes outlandish stories and experiences – encircling that globe the good Lord hung in the night sky for us humans: the blue lantern.

OIL INTO FIRE – Misguided Climate Policies and the Global Crisis

- Bestselling author Kathrin Hartmann reveals where climate policy went wrong.
- A stirring analysis of our inadequate efforts to combat climate change and the increasing natural disasters it causes.

July 2024 · 272 pages

© Thomas Dasthuber

Kathrin Hartmann, born in Ulm in 1972, began her journalism career at Frankfurter Rundschau after studying in Frankfurt. Since then, she has focused on environmental policy intersecting with corporate interests, authoring five more books including bestsellers like Aus kontrolliertem Raubbau and Die grüne Lüge. In 2017, she participated in Milo Rau's World Parliament General Assembly and contributed to Werner Boote's documentary Die grüne Lüge.

Why climate protection measures are not only useless, but even dangerous.

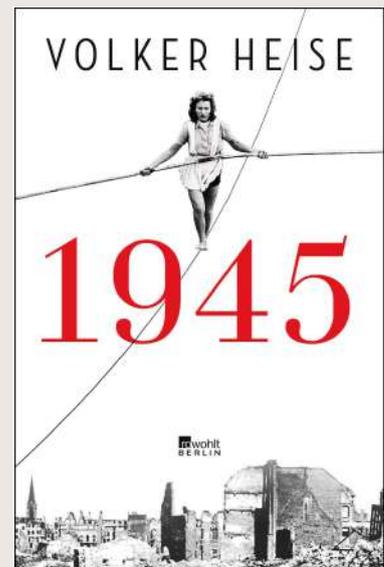

World climate conferences in oil states, LNG terminals off German coasts, a green government with no funds for public transport but subsidies for company cars? This is the bitter reality: Current events are worsening global warming. Instead of protecting the climate, we are fueling the fire.

Renowned journalist Kathrin Hartmann reveals what climate policy means in the context of perpetual economic growth. She visits the "sacrifice zones" in the southern U.S., where so-called "clean" liquefied natural gas is shipped to Europe, and Zambia, where people are displaced to make way for the billion-dollar business of dubious CO₂ certificates. The shift from CO₂ reduction to dangerous pseudo-solutions like 'carbon management' and underground CO₂ storage seems inevitable.

1945

- Volker Heise's gripping panorama for the 80th anniversary of the end of World War II.
- The chronicle of a year that condenses different voices, stories and fates into a grand narrative: with new archive material and eyewitness accounts.

November 2024 · 352 pages

Volker Heise, born in 1961 in Hoya, is a director, producer, and documentary filmmaker. His works, including Schwarzwaldhaus 1902 and Zeit der Helden, have earned him prestigious awards such as the Grimme Prize and the German Television Award. Recent movie projects include Berlin 1945, Berlin 1933, and the Netflix production Gladbeck. Das Geiseldrama. Heise is also the author of the novel Außer Kontrolle. He resides in Berlin.

The year 1945: catastrophe and new beginnings.

1945: A year between catastrophe and new beginnings. The Germans send a last contingent of young and old men into battle, the Allies advance closer, civilians are on the run or seeking shelter in the war's ruins. In May, the war ends; people crawl out of the ruins, facing an uncertain future. Daily life continues, but the world is different.

On the 80th anniversary of the end of the war, Volker Heise presents a gripping account of 1945, spanning the whole year from New Year's Eve to New Year's Eve. He uses diaries, letters, memories, and unpublished archive material, including eyewitness accounts, to offer a unique perspective. These voices and stories come together in a sweeping narrative that connects a variety of experiences directly. A portrait of a year unlike any we have seen before.

"A strong rhythm, dense descriptions, razor-sharp images that no one will forget." Frankfurter Allgemeine Sonntagszeitung on Außer Kontrolle

FIVE REASONS THE WORLD WILL NOT END

- This book presents five ways out of many current crises: practical solutions instead of posing new questions.
- The author belongs to one of 100 Young Global Leaders under forty.

October 2024 · 128 pages

Florian Hoffmann is the founder of The DO, a global platform for a new economy that is sustainable, innovative, and just. The DO operates internationally with offices in Berlin, Hong Kong, and New York. Florian was recognized by the World Economic Forum as one of the 100 Young Global Leaders under the age of forty for his work. He serves on the board of the World Future Council, is a Fellow of the Tribeca Disruptive Innovation Awards, and is a juror for the million-dollar Global Teacher Prize. He studied at the University of Oxford, Duke University, Bard College, and Humboldt University. Currently, he resides in Berlin with his wife and daughter.

Innovative projects that offer a way out of major crises.

Wherever we look, there are problems: a planet in crisis, an economy changing too slowly, societies divided. And in the midst of it all, there are people who often feel overwhelmed. This book demonstrates that there is ample reason for hope, and that we can even be excited about the future – excited to be a part of shaping it.

Progress is happening, even though it may often seem like the climate crisis is unstoppable. Progress is taking place, for instance, in rural Egypt, where Helmi Abouleish and his family have successfully established Demeter farming in the desert, and in Singapore, where Good Meat is revolutionizing our food with lab-grown meat.

Florian Hoffmann takes us through innovative projects worldwide that serve as models for a better future, as change at a small scale can set the stage for larger transformations.

Veronika Hucke

MEN'S CLUB AND WOMEN'S BONUS – Why Stereotypes Harm

- Effective anti-discrimination strategies from a leading expert in diversity, equity, and inclusion.

October 2024 · 128 pages

Veronika Hucke has been advising companies and organizations on diversity and equal opportunities since 2014 and is the author of several books on this topic (e.g., "Fair führen" published by Campus). With over 20 years of experience in leadership roles in international corporations, her most recent position was overseeing Philips' global DEI strategy.

Men close ranks tightly while women often advance through quotas? Today, the narratives are more nuanced but still hinder success. So-called "female virtues" have gained new value in the workplace. Increasingly, people say women make better leaders. The catch? They must fit the stereotype of "real women" – friendly, team-oriented, and always ready to help others. Men are seen as decisive and assertive, and those who do not fit the mold face low chances. Such gender stereotypes hold back companies, growth, and the economy. Today's work environment is defined by VUCA: volatility, uncertainty, complexity, and ambiguity. Everyone, regardless of gender or identity, should have the chance to grow according to their own goals.

This book explains why we must move beyond "typical woman" and "typical man" and what we stand to gain.

THE SEVEN DEADLY SINS – Human Knowledge for the Age of Crisis

- An exciting rediscovery of these doctrines that gives us orientation for today's times of crisis.
- Historiography as it should be: innovative, thrilling, urgent and relevant.
- Rights for Kehnel's previous bestselling title were sold to Korea, the Netherlands, Turkey and the UK.
- English sample translation available.

September 2024 · 320 pages

Annette Kehnel studied history and biology at Albert-Ludwigs-Universität Freiburg, Somerville College Oxford, and LMU Munich. Her doctoral studies at Trinity College Dublin focused on the research of Irish monastic communities, after which she habilitated at the University of Dresden. Since 2005, she has held the Chair of Medieval History at the University of Mannheim. Her book Wir konnten auch anders (2021), in which Kehnel explores medieval sustainability knowledge for the present, became a Spiegel bestseller and won the NDR Non-Fiction Book Prize.

We live in an era of crisis, yet we have little idea how to escape the imperative of "more and more" or deeply change our way of life. Annette Kehnel reveals that we once understood this very clearly. She takes us on a journey to the Middle Ages, where she discovers millennia-old human wisdom still relevant today in the teachings of the seven deadly sins. Each of the sins represents a condition of our human existence: luxuria (lust) relates to moderate consumption, avaritia (greed) to the understanding that ownership and wealth must be limited; ira (anger) addresses aggression and violence, invidia (envy) the flip side of competition, and superbia (pride) our pursuit of status and power.

This presents a surprisingly modern view of humanity aiming for balance, resonance, and harmony, offering a new perspective on our times and their challenges. The traditional wisdom contained in the teachings of the deadly sins provides a path for dealing with our destructive side. Kehnel uncovers this knowledge for the present day, showing how it can help us change ourselves and the world.

A BRIEF HISTORY OF THE AFD – From Euro-Criticism to Remigration Scandal

- For those wanting to understand how right-wing extremism gained political power.

August 2024 · 272 pages

© Philipp Sipos

Eva Kienholz, born in 1987 in Heidelberg, studied German studies, history, and German literature in Mannheim and Berlin. She works as a journalist and freelance writer. In 2015, she began to extensively engage with the AfD and the New Right. Her book Ihr Kampf. Wie Höcke & Co. die AfD radikalisieren was published in 2020.

When the political party AfD (Alternative für Deutschland) was founded in February 2013 in a community hall in Oberursel, no one anticipated how much the 18 attendees would change Germany. Initially established as a fiscally conservative party, the AfD has since radicalized through several phases. While Bernd Lucke once considered how to withdraw from the Euro, Björn Höcke now advocates for the "remigration" of people with migrant backgrounds. Despite this, or perhaps because of it, the AfD has steadily gained favor with voters. In Saxony, Thuringia, and Brandenburg, it may become the strongest political force in the upcoming elections.

Eva Kienholz tracks the party's evolution, which has veered increasingly to the right and now openly seeks power in the country. This is an important book for understanding Germany's political landscape.

Ron Leshem, born in 1976 in Tel Aviv, is a novelist, screenwriter, and former Israeli intelligence officer. He works in Hollywood and Tel Aviv and has co-developed the internationally acclaimed series Euphoria and co-written the script for the series No Man's Land, among other projects. His novels Der geheime Basar and Wenn es ein Paradies gibt remained on the bestseller list in Israel for months. Wenn es ein Paradies gibt received Israel's prestigious Sapir Prize in literature and was adapted into a film titled Beaufort, which won the Silver Bear at the Berlinale and received an Oscar nomination. His latest work is Als wir schön waren (2022).

What happened on October 7th – A book about the day that changed the world.

On October 7th, 2023, Hamas unleashed terror on Israel, and since then, the world has been holding its breath as events unfold rapidly. Ron Leshem recounts that day and the developments that have followed, shedding light on a deeply divided country. The liberal, peace-seeking segment of society was particularly affected. What will the consequences be?

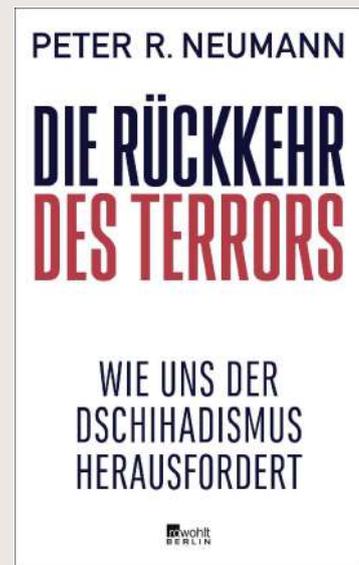

Leshem, an internationally renowned author, journalist, and former Israeli intelligence officer, is personally affected as well. Hamas murdered his uncle, aunt and months later also his abducted cousin who was also a German citizen. This is a glimpse into the reality of Israel that brings the country close to us in a very personal way while providing a broader perspective. An important and moving contribution that makes the conflict understandable.

"Ron Leshem creates a whole world with words alone." David Grossman

THE RETURN OF TERROR – How Jihadism Challenges Us

- What is the new terror wave's impact on Europe?
- A sharp analysis of jihadist terrorism's evolution since the late 1990s.
- Neumann's previous title Die neue Weltunordnung was sold to the UK (Scribe).

October 2024 · 176 pages

Peter R. Neumann, born in Würzburg in 1974, is Professor of Security Studies at King's College London, where he directed the International Centre for the Study of Radicalisation (ICSR) for many years. As an internationally sought-after expert, Neumann served as advisor to the USA at the United Nations in 2014. In 2017 he was special representative to the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE). He also writes for Der Spiegel and The New York Times, among others. His book Die neuen Dschihadisten was a bestseller.

Islamist terrorism has returned: October 7 has fueled the Middle East conflict more than anything else in recent decades. The nervous and indecisive reactions in Germany and Europe reflect the political landscape. Beneath that, a new movement targeting Israel and Jews is emerging, which is difficult to identify and stop. Sometimes it is possible, but often it is not.

Peter R. Neumann, a leading terrorism expert, says the jihadist threat is back – maybe even stronger than ten years ago. Since October 7, there have been eight attempted terrorist attacks in Europe, more than the entire previous year. Europe faces a new wave of jihadist attacks, this time targeting Jewish lives. This is a major challenge for the idea of Europe as a place where people of different backgrounds and religions can live together peacefully. Populists and right-wing extremists might also benefit politically from this wave of jihadist attacks.

"A far-sighted analysis of the world order – and an urgent warning of what the future may bring." Peter Frankopan

- A plea for hope from one of the most globally recognized climate activists (The Times listed her as one of the 100 global emerging voices).
- One of her previous books was sold to the US (Brandeis University Press).

January 2025 · 112 pages

Luisa Neubauer, born in 1996 in Hamburg, is one of the most globally recognized climate activists. After she met the Swedish student Greta Thunberg at the UN Climate Change Conference in 2018, she started the movement in Germany together with other activists. Her most recent work, co-authored with Dagmar Reemtsma, is Gegen die Ohnmacht (2022). Since 2020, she has been hosting the climate podcast 1.5 Degrees. The geography student resides in Göttingen and Berlin.

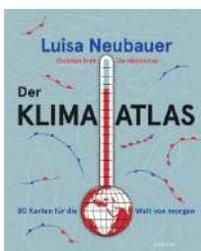

How can we bravely confront the climate crisis? A plea for hope.

For years, people have been fighting for the future habitability of our planet. Luisa Neubauer is one of them. Yet, to this day, the world fails to democratically organize the necessary climate protection. Why is not more happening, even though the scientific facts have long been known? Where does the anti-climate aggression from the right come from? Why do even the visible climate catastrophes not lead to a societal shift in thinking?

Luisa Neubauer analyzes the power struggles behind the climate crisis, uncovers the fossil roots of our democracy, and illustrates what a realistic utopia on our planet could look like.

"Luisa Neubauer is not only rhetorically and strategically strong and versatile, not only charismatic, but she is also an intellectual." taz

REBEL OF THE STREETS – Female and Homeless

- The first book about women experiencing homelessness.
- A compelling life story of a former homeless woman and a passionate call to support those affected.

October 2024 · 240 pages

© Manfred Wegener

Linda Rennings is the founder of the organization Heimatlos in Köln, which supports homeless women in Cologne. For years, she has directly faced the hardships and struggles that women without shelter encounter. Today, she supports them day and night and has made it her life's mission to raise awareness about the growing number of homeless women in Germany.

Albrecht Kieser is a freelance author based in Cologne.

Linda Rennings spent six years living on the streets, one of which she spent beside the grave of her beloved grandmother, the only close person from her childhood. Her unflinching account of her harsh life as a homeless person exemplifies the experiences of many women who face unique dangers on the streets. Rennings is dedicated to raising awareness of their suffering. Now, through her organization "Heimatlos in Köln", Linda Rennings helps homeless women. She calls for action, support for those affected, and engagement with the challenges of increasing homelessness. Anyone who wants to understand the daily struggle of the growing number of homeless people and embrace social responsibility must know about Linda Rennings' work.

SMALL MOMENTS, BIG CITY

- Love, sorrow, laughter – Linda Rachel Sabiers' everyday observations are a diary of the metropolis and its people.

November 2024 · 224 pages

© Max Zerrahn

Linda Rachel Sabiers, born in 1984, is an author and columnist. Born in Cologne to an Israeli mother and a German father, she writes for various magazines. She authored a column on Jewish life in Germany for the Süddeutsche Zeitung. She resides in Berlin.

Almost everyone knows these moments: You are sitting in a café or on a bus, overhearing a conversation, and suddenly you find yourself smiling. Linda Rachel Sabiers is a master at collecting and retelling these special moments: an unwittingly funny exchange of words between strangers, a tender gesture between two people who have known each other for a long time, a pointed banter between friends. Each of these miniatures tells a little story, sometimes rough, sometimes raw, sometimes loving, sometimes hateful, desperate, or hilariously funny. As diverse as life itself. A wonderful book for people who appreciate everyday stories.

"Life is the sum of many moments, and nobody captures the truth of the moment as beautifully as Linda. Detail-oriented, wise, and mindful, she lets us be present in the moment with all our senses – right in the midst of the magic of life." Susan Sideropoulos, German actress and television presenter.

LOOK WHAT SHE MADE US DO – About Taylor Swift

- The perfect gift for fans and curious minds exploring the biggest pop phenomenon of our time.

July 2024 · 160 pages

© Mareike Hardter

Anne Sauer is a freelance copywriter, podcaster, and moderator based in Hamburg. Born in 1989, like Taylor Swift, she studied Book Science and Philosophy and completed the Hamburg School of Ideas program. She serves on literature juries and recommends books on her podcast or on Instagram. She would rather not be asked about her favorite Taylor Swift album, but she would probably answer with Reputation.

A love letter to the living pop icon of today.

She breaks all records in music history, fills the largest stadiums worldwide, and is feared by Donald Trump: Taylor Swift is the biggest, most influential pop phenomenon of our time. How did a girl with a guitar become a global star with millions of devoted fans, and why is it so cool to be a "Swiftie"?

Book influencer and Swiftie Anne Sauer examines her own connection to Taylor Swift and embarks on a personal journey through the "eras" of the past two decades. In 13 chapters, she explores the history of the phenomenon, delves into Swift's musical evolution, and critically examines the reception of the pop star and her own fandom. What does it mean for an artist to constantly reinvent themselves? Where does the need to downplay such unique success come from? And what does it say about critics who seem eager to see a woman fail.

- Highly acclaimed, globally recognized philosopher Bettina Stangneth explores how we read, what it means, and why it matters.
- Rights to previous titles were sold to China, France, Korea, Sweden and The Netherlands.

December 2024 · 288 pages

Born in 1966, Bettina Stangneth is an independent philosopher. She studied philosophy in Hamburg and wrote her doctorate on Immanuel Kant and radical evil. Her book Eichmann vor Jerusalem was awarded the NDR Kultur Non-Fiction Prize in 2011; the New York Times ranked it among the best books of the year. Rowohlt has most recently published her highly praised essays Böses Denken (2015), Lügen lesen (2017) and Hässliches Sehen (2019), as well as the volumes Sexkultur (2021) and Überforderung (2022). In 2022, Bettina Stangneth was awarded the International Friedrich Nietzsche Prize.

A book for readers who want to know what it means to truly read.

Whenever the PISA study headlines that children are reading less, there is an uproar. We almost forget what seems to scare people more these days: readers not reading the “right” books or readers who may misunderstand what they read. In an era when authors fear unpredictable readers as much as editors and publishers worry about every risky word, even considering warning labels for classics that cannot simply be rewritten, the question arises: How did we ever come to believe that reading is essential to an informed citizenry if books are so dangerous that they pose a risk to democracy? Why do we value children learning to read so much?

Philosopher Bettina Stangneth asks these questions and offers a surprising answer: We are not being honest when we talk about reading. Instead of warning about dangerous books, we should discuss what reading truly is and how to read any book well – not with fear, but with the insatiable curiosity of philosophers.

"Stangneth is a brilliant writer and an elegant thinker." DLF

US AGAIN – 16 Jewish stories

- A contemporary collection of 16 Jewish voices expressing their thoughts through prose, stories, and essays.

August 2024 · 240 pages

Dana von Suffrin, currently residing in Munich, was born in the city in 1985. She studied in Munich, Naples, and Jerusalem, completing her PhD in 2017 with a thesis on early Zionism. Her debut novel "Otto" garnered several awards, including the Klaus Michael Kühne Prize (2019) and the Ernst Hoferichter Prize (2020).

It is notable that a Jewish literature scene exists in Germany today. Despite the differences among the writers in this collection, they share a Jewish upbringing, intellectual tradition, and a complex relationship with the German majority. The events of October 7 in Israel highlighted this connection. This inspired the creation of Jüdisch, deutsch etc. Dana von Suffrin gathered many notable contributors, and this anthology features 16 writers who, despite their political, personal, and artistic differences, share prose, stories, and essays about what matters to them now.

Contributors include Adriana Altaras, Maxim Biller, Zelta Biller, Yevgeniy Breyger, Joe Fleisch, Marina Frenk, Lena Gorelik, Elfriede Jelinek, Dmitrij Kapitelman, Olga Mannheimer, Eva Menasse, Slata Roschal, Linda Rachel Sabiers, Dana von Suffrin, Ljudmila Ulitzkaja, and Dana Vowinckel.

TECH HYPES – How to Survive Them

- Targeted insider knowledge from Silicon Valley's key players.
- How to become more resilient for the next tech hype.

November 2024 · 128 pages

Felix Zeltner works as a journalist for Arte, ARD radio, and magazines like Geo and Wired focuses on science, technology, and society. Zeltner advises companies and publishers on digitization and organizes events on the future of work. He lives in New York with his wife and child.

Christina Horsten is the New York correspondent for the German Press Agency (dpa). She grew up in Bonn, Prague, and Berlin, where she earned her PhD from the Freie Universität. In 2012, she moved back to her hometown of New York to work for dpa. Now, she lives there with her husband and their two daughters.

Every million invested raises the narrative's value, not the truth's.

Hype is essential for the tech industry: Simple narratives promise upheavals of biblical proportions and present ready-made technological solutions. From the Internet of Things and crypto to the meta-verse, AI, and quantum computing, these hypes create billionaires and empty the accounts of others. With every million dollars invested in these promises, more people become invested in them. A first step is to acknowledge these waves of exaggerated trends and consider that the truth may be different. Is the promise technically feasible? There are experts who can answer that, but they are not usually the loudest voices.

This book gathers insights from those who truly understand the rise and resistance of technology hypes. It presents their economic consequences and helps readers become more resilient to the next hype.

Tanja Bogusz

THE GIRL AND THE FIVE-MARK COIN – Growing Up on St. Pauli

- A compelling story of a woman's rise from Hamburg's red light district to an elite school in Paris.

July 2024 · 224 pages

© Andrea Kueppers

Sociologist Tanja Bogusz shares her touching and vivid experiences growing up in Hamburg's red-light district St. Pauli. She tells stories of her grandmother Klasina, a Dutch immigrant who became a female wrestler in Hamburg, and her mother Barbara, who fled an abusive orphanage to join Klasina in the neighborhood and later worked as a barmaid in the 1970s. Barbara wanted to give Tanja a better life and achieved financial independence, which was rare for women at the time. Though Barbara challenged Tanja, she also trusted her abilities. Tanja learned autonomy and determination, which led her to an academic career.

Tanja Bogusz, is a sociologist and researcher at the University of Hamburg. She studied under Pierre Bourdieu in Paris, was a Fellow at New York University, and held visiting professorships in Berlin, Paris, and Kassel. She's also the eponym of a South Pacific sea snail. She has published scholarly books with reputable publishers like Campus and Springer Nature.

"LOVE'S UTMOST INTENSITY" – Thomas Mann and Paul Ehrenberg

- The full story of Thomas Mann and painter Paul Ehrenberg, told for the first time using new sources.

November 2024 · 256 pages

© Artur Fischer-Meny

Oliver Fischer, born in 1970, studied German literature, art history, and Catholic theology. He works as a freelance journalist in Hamburg, contributing to publications such as Geo Epoche and Merian. In 2016, he founded the Thomas Mann Society Hamburg, of which he is the chairman.

"One cannot experience love more intensely", wrote Thomas Mann in 1943 about his relationship with Paul Ehrenberg. The two met in 1899 in a Munich salon. Ehrenberg was studying animal painting, while Mann was an editor at Simplicissimus working on his first novel, Buddenbrooks. Their meeting drew the reserved Mann out of his shell. Paul showed him the lively side of Munich, introducing him to coffee-houses and carnival balls in Schwabing.

Their close friendship lasted several years. Even after their paths diverged in 1933 – Paul stayed in Germany and adapted to the Nazis, while Mann went into exile – they remained significant to each other. Oliver Fischer details their life stories, which culminate in Mann's novel Doctor Faustus. In it, Mann immortalizes his love for Paul as the conflicted violinist Rudi Schwerdtfeger, who is killed by a jealous lover.

Willi Winkler

KISSINGER & UNSELD – A Friendship of Two Survivors

- The gripping story of a surprising friendship – between the future US National Security Advisor and Secretary of State, Henry Kissinger, who fled the Nazis as a Jew, and the former Wehrmacht soldier and later successful publisher of the German Suhrkamp publishing house, Siegfried Unseld.
- An exciting discovery: the book is based on previously unknown archive material.

September 2024 · 224 pages

Born in 1957, Willi Winkler was a staff writer at Die Zeit, headed the culture section at Der Spiegel and today writes for the Süddeutsche Zeitung. He has also written many books; in 1998 he received the Ben Witter Prize, and in 2010 was awarded the Otto Brenner Prize for critical journalism. He also won the 2013 Michael Althen Prize.

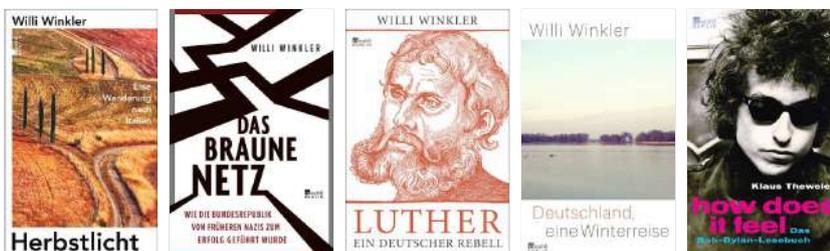

The gripping story of an unexpected friendship.

In the summer of 1955, two survivors meet on the campus of Harvard University: Henry Kissinger, who fled from Jewish persecution to America in 1938, and Siegfried Unseld, who fought in Hitler's army against the Soviet Union and narrowly escaped death in Sevastopol by swimming out to open sea. At Harvard's International Seminar, hosted by the rising professor Kissinger for future global leaders, both men begin to establish networks that would fuel their future success – Kissinger as Nixon's advisor and a global statesman, and Unseld as one of West Germany's most prominent publishers. Though their backgrounds could not be more different, literature keeps them connected.

In this gripping dual portrait, Willi Winkler tells the little-known but captivating story of an unusual friendship, shedding light on the intersections between literature and world politics.

"Willi Winkler is one of our most evil and one of our most tender writers. In short: he is a fantastic storyteller." Claudius Seidl

Stephanie Hielscher was born in Lippstadt in 1977. After some geographical and academic detours, she completed her studies in cultural studies with a focus on documentary film in Berlin, followed by an internship at music channel MTV. Since then, she has been working as a freelance journalist, hosting the podcast "50 über 50" since 2022 and delving into topics related to life after 50 with her guests. She lives in Berlin with her husband, son, and dog.

The decade over 50 is full of opportunities!

What can I expect when I turn fifty? Where can I find role models for this stage of life? In Germany, there are eight million women between the ages of fifty and sixty. How is it possible that most of them are invisible? As she approached her own 50th birthday, driven by curiosity, Stephanie Hielscher set out to find women in the middle of their lives. She met with actresses, authors, entrepreneurs, politicians, and doctors to talk about aging and the associated topics: menopause, separations, financial planning, career changes, but also new opportunities, bold transformations, and great freedoms. She discovers that there is a lot for women over fifty to look forward to. This book contains the essence of her meetings and conversations, along with countless experiences, ideas, and advice that inspire and genuinely make you look forward to getting older.

MY SWABIA – Living and Dining in the Land of Wilfulness

- Gourmet cook Vincent Klink portrays Swabia: a home game with great food.
- 200,000 copies of his books sold altogether!

November 2024 · 256 pages

Vincent Klink was born in 1949 and is the owner of the renowned gourmet restaurant Wielandshöhe in Stuttgart. He is the host of two cooking programs on German public television and also publishes a literary-culinary magazine.

Vincent Klink is one of the most prominent contemporary Swabians. He lives in Stuttgart, where he runs his restaurant, but he often ventures out to the surrounding areas, visiting the inns of his region. Klink takes a self-deprecating look at his fellow Swabians: How do they tick, these people known in the rest of Germany as orderly homeowners or rebellious protestors? Why are they so stubborn, so ascetic, so wine-loving, so humorous, so stingy, so generous, so sensible, so irrational?

Klink guides readers through Swabia's complex history, tracing the spirit of contradiction he observes in his homeland, from Friedrich Schiller to Robert Bosch, from the Peasants' War to Stuttgart 21. He describes Protestantism – "efficiency through constant guilt" – from his Catholic upbringing and explains how pre-industrial poverty drove Swabian creativity and how the region became prosperous. Of course, a tour of the local cuisine is not to be missed, with classics such as Spätzle and Maultaschen, as well as delicacies whose names might not immediately reveal their contents: Katzenschrei, Luckelekäs, Ringlesspatzen, or Gsälz.

"The mix of stories, insights, and recipes is, as usual with Klink, delicious and rich." Hannoversche Allgemeine Zeitung

BE AHEAD OF THE GAME – 13 Ways to Navigate Tomorrow's World

- Feeling lost? Bestselling author, mentalist, and philosopher Timon Krause offers guidance for turbulent times.
- Thirteen mindsets to prepare us for present and future challenges.

August 2024 · 288 pages

© Murat Aslan

Timon Christiaan Krause, born in 1994, is a German mentalist and author. He studied philosophy in Amsterdam and currently resides in Berlin. In 2016, he was awarded as the best European mentalist.

New thinking for the future.

The rapidly advancing changes in our society not only challenge us but often overwhelm us: political certainties crumble, family structures dissolve, crises shake us, and religion loses its role as a source of support. Too often, the learned (post-)modern ways of thinking and viewing the world fail us in confronting these issues.

Timon Krause, a trained philosopher, Spiegel bestseller author, and award-winning mentalist, explores which thought models can provide guidance in an increasingly confusing world. Combining accessible, practical insights from psychology, sociology, and philosophy, he describes approaches that will help us better navigate the future. These include establishing dialogue instead of dialectic, accepting paradoxes, and learning to endure ambivalence, as well as thinking optimistically despite tragedies. An engaging and helpful read!

HOW WORK MAKES US HAPPY – And When to Think About Changing Jobs

- Clear strategies for changing your worklife.
- Latest work psychology insights explained simply and engagingly.

December 2024 · 256 pages

© Britt Schilling

Prof. Dr. Claas Lahmann is the Medical Director of the Psychosomatic Medicine and Psychotherapy Clinic at the Freiburger Universitätsklinik. He researches how work can make us sick and helps people affected by stressful work environments. He also advises employers on prevention.

Work keeps you healthy, but it can also make you very ill: sleep disorders, anxiety, depression, chronic back and headaches are just a few of the symptoms that people seek help for from Prof. Dr. Claas Lahmann. Often, these are the result of years of stress at work that manifests physically. No one should have to endure a situation that causes illness; instead, they deserve a work environment where they feel safe, content, and valued. This book helps to assess one's own situation, bring about change through small adjustments in daily work routines, and break out of a harmful hamster wheel. Often, there are many more possibilities to change unpleasant and burdensome work situations for the better or take new paths than one might think. According to the motto: Love it, change it, or leave it! Prof. Lahmann demonstrates how to find satisfaction both at work and in life.

LEAVE OR CONTINUE TO SUFFER? – Separation and Divorce in Later Years

- An experienced lawyer and psychologist offer insights and inspiration for fresh starts.
- Fourteen relatable cases clarify legal and psychological aspects.

August 2024 · 288 pages

Renate Maltry is a specialist lawyer for family law and inheritance law, and the owner of the law firm MALTY Lawyers (Munich). In addition to various specialist articles, she regularly contributes articles on inheritance law for a German Newspaper. In 2013, she was awarded the Bavarian Order of Merit for her legal merits and voluntary commitment. As an experienced lawyer, she maintains a holistic perspective that considers the fears and concerns of her clients as well as legal questions.

Heinz-Günter Andersch-Sattler is a psychological psychotherapist, child and family therapist, and founder and director of the SynTraum Institute for Psychotherapy (Augsburg). For years, he has been organizing congresses in the field of trauma therapy, systemic therapy, and counseling.

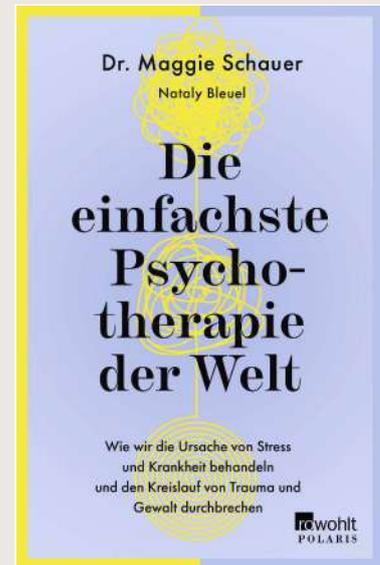

Many people over the age of 45, 55, or even 65 find themselves saying, 'Now life is parting us after all,' when they seek the help of a lawyer. Divorce after decades of marriage is no longer taboo. Statistics reveal surprising facts: in Germany, nearly three times as many marriages are dissolved after the silver anniversary compared to the so-called "difficult" seventh year. There are also many couples who separate without getting divorced. Different visions for their shared retirement, illness, loss of feelings, or even a late-life coming out can lead to separation.

In fourteen case stories, experienced lawyer Renate Maltry and psychologist Heinz-Günter Andersch-Sattler explore the unique challenges of divorcing after a long marriage from legal and psychological perspectives. The result is an informative, realistic guide that provides clear explanations of legal aspects and encourages those affected to reshape their lives.

THE WORLD'S EASIEST PSYCHOTHERAPY – Treating Stress and Illness, Breaking Trauma and Violence

- Trauma affects us all more than we realize. This book serves as a wake-up call and a source of inspiration.
- An innovative, well-founded and easy-to-use method for understanding and healing trauma from a top expert in the field.
- English sample translation available.

August 2024 · 320 pages

© Claudia Gori

PD Dr. Maggie Schauer is one of the leading experts in trauma treatment in Germany. She teaches Clinical Psychology at the University of Konstanz and co-founded the NGO vivo international, which helps overcome and prevent traumatic stress. She's known for developing Narrative Exposure Therapy (NET) and her work with trauma survivors worldwide.

Nataly Bleuel, a journalist and author, writes for esteemed publications such as Die Zeit, Geo, and Süddeutsche Zeitung. She specializes in exploring the human dimension of medicine and has been recognized with multiple awards for her reportages and interviews.

What causes trauma? Leading psychotraumatologist Dr. Maggie Schauer explains how many people experience trauma even in seemingly peaceful environments due to domestic violence, abuse, rejection, illness, and other challenging life events. She notes that those who inflict harm often experienced violence themselves. Abused women struggle to trust others, impacting their relationships. Stressful events, trauma, and loss shape lives long before people seek help or perpetuate violence themselves. Trauma can be passed down through generations. Schauer co-developed the "Narrative Exposure Therapy", an evidence-based form of autobiographical storytelling that helps resolve trauma. This approach allows individuals to break the cycle of suffering and violence.

"Traumatisation affects us all. Much more than we realise. That is why this book is intended to be a wake-up call and an encouragement." Maggie Schauer

DAWN OF THE NEW ERA – The Dramatic 16th Century

- A great epochal book which shows the connection to the present.
- English sample translation available.

Embarking on new horizons and the world's transformation.

In the long 16th century, the world undergoes profound changes. When Christopher Columbus discovered an unknown continent in 1492, it marked the beginning of European claims over this "new" world, and Christianity became a global religion. Simultaneously, the Old World faced immense pressure from the expanding Ottoman Empire, and shortly thereafter, Martin Luther's posting of his theses shattered its religious unity. Marina Münkler traverses this dramatic era of discoveries and conflicts. She describes the media revolution of the printing press, the Reformation, the birth of modern natural science, as well as peasant uprisings and witch burnings. It was a century that was groundbreaking in every respect, and as Marina Münkler demonstrates, it has much in common with our own era. A significant historical work about the dawn of a new era, our era.

EVERYWHERE ALL AT ONCE – How AI is Changing Our World and What We Can Gain

- How to set the right course now: A guide to the world of tomorrow.
- English sample translation available.

We are witnessing the "iPhone moment" of artificial intelligence; the technology is now accessible to everyone. This marks a crucial threshold in our cultural evolution. Everything is changing all at once. Miriam Meckel and Léa Steinacker highlight the opportunities that come with crossing this threshold. We do not need to fear being replaced as humans because everything AI does is based on how we interact with it. However, we are now tasked with guiding its development in the right direction. But how do we achieve this, and where do unwanted side effects and ethical dilemmas lurk? According to Meckel and Steinacker, if we want to keep up in an increasingly complex world, we must expand our human intelligence – even AI can help with that. What does the world of tomorrow look like, how do we navigate it, and make the right decisions? This book provides guidance.

SORRY NOT SORRY – About Female Shame

How does shame relate to femininity?

Since my childhood, I have been plagued by the feeling of not being good enough. The fact that women are systematically belittled and taken less seriously than men has intensified this sensation. For years, I apologized for almost everything I did or did not say, while simultaneously feeling the need to claim more space and break free from socially accepted mechanisms of oppression. Feeling shame is completely normal, regardless of gender. However, women tend to feel shame and apologize more frequently, whether it's for their bodies, their success, their single status, or their choice to remain childless. Anika Landsteiner has observed this phenomenon in herself and explores why it happens. Through insightful, personal essays covering all aspects of her life – from work and illness to sexuality and coming to terms with her own history – she reflects on self-worth, boundaries, and her determination not to diminish herself any longer, neither to herself nor to others.
